KENT TEST IS 'ABUSE' OF PUPILS

Headteachers launch blistering attack on 'ludicrous' and 'damaging' 11-plus

THE darker side of the selective schooling system, where 75 per cent of children are labelled 'failures' and success depends more on family wealth than natural aptitude, has been exposed by a headteacher.

Phil Karnavas, principal of The Canterbury High School, a comprehensive rated 'outstanding' by Ofsted, said some of the 10 and 11-year-olds who sit the Kent Test will 'fail' after being put under immense pressure to pass.

The damage to their self-esteem could be profound, he said.

"It was this that led to a Kent County Council official remarking to me that some may see this as being pretty close to the emotional abuse of children," he told Kent on Sunday.

"I am afraid that I cannot change my view that to some extent success in the [11-plus] test now depends in part upon a parent's ability and willingness to pay for it.

By JENNA PUDELEK

"This is a difficult area. All parents want their children to do well and so I would not presume to say they are wrong.

"What I do say is it is wrong to place them in a position where they feel they have to make this choice."

Mr Karnavas said he was not criticising grammar schools, but the education system of selection, or what he calls "a system of rejection", and the way selection is made.

There are 39 grammar schools across Kent and Medway and they are the only fully selective local authorities in the county.

"In such a system the perceived success of the few depends upon the actual failure of the many," Mr Karnavas said.

"In Kent, 75 per cent of children are labelled failures because they are not entered for the test; or, they are entered for the test and fail it; or, they fail at appeal. This must damage a young child's self-esteem and confidence. In some cases this damage will linger a lifetime."

Ian Johnston, principal of the Marlowe Academy in Ramsgate, said he would also like to see the selective system scrapped.

"I think it is completely ludicrous sitting the test at age 10 or 11," he said.

"The pressure and the expectations put on them is completely unwarranted.

"I've been in teaching for 28 years in comprehensive schools and for the life of me cannot get my head around this totally divisive system. I'm not sure it is even motivating or encouraging the most able to achieve as highly as they might.

"I know for a fact the issue those who fail face; the stigma of that, but also the difficulties they face working in high schools."

Mr Johnston said in his experience, grammar schools were trying to protect traditions and ways of working from the 1950s, which was not the best preparation for children

Fatal superbug trust again rated as 'weak'

By JENNA PUDELEK

jenna.pudelek@kosmedia.co.uk

THE hospital trust at the centre of the notorious superbug scandal that led to the deaths of 90 patients has been rated 'weak' for the quality of its services.

Maidstone and Tunbridge Wells NHS Trust, which was hit by two outbreaks of Clostridium difficile between 2004 and 2006, did not meet one of three infection control standards in the Care Quality Commission's 2008-09 annual health check.

The trust, which has been rated weak for the third year running, said its score did not reflect the improvements it has made since the Healthcare Commission's damning report into the outbreaks was published in October, 2007.

Trust chief executive Glenn Douglas said: "We have made significant progress in the quality of our services in the last 18 months and while we accept the score is still likely to be 'weak', this is definitely an instance where a single word will not do us justice."

He said the trust was meeting 40 of CQC's 44 core standards and would be meeting the remaining four "within months".

Responding to concern's over the trust's infection control record, Sara Mumford, director of infection prevention and control, said: "This [result] relates to measures the trust was still putting in place from April, 2008 - 18 months ago - which then led to one of the biggest reductions in cases of hospital acquired infections in the country last year."

"Because not all of these infection control measures were in place from April 1, 2008, we cannot and did not claim to be fully compliant with this indicator for the entire year, which is the standard required by the CQC."

Shortfall

"We have some of the highest levels of cleanliness and safety. Patients can be reassured that infection control remains the highest priority of our board and all of our staff and this is reflected in the very low levels of infection we continue to achieve."

The CQC report said the trust was meeting all infection control standards by November, 2008, and noted it has some of the lowest rates of MRSA and C diff in the South East.

Roxy Boyce, regional director of the CQC, urged the trust, which was among only two in the south east to score 'weak', to address the shortfall in its performance.

Other Kent trusts performed better, with three among the six in the region rated 'excellent' for financial performance, including Medway NHS Foundation Trust, Dartford and Gravesham NHS Trust and East Kent Hospitals University NHS Foundation Trust.

East Kent was rated 'good overall' for services, which is an improvement on last year's 'fair'. Medway was rated 'fair overall' and Dartford and Gravesham was 'rated good'.

Maidstone and Tunbridge Wells NHS Trust has been striving to improve infection rates since the Healthcare Commission, which has now been replaced by the CQC, published its damning investigation into the C diff outbreaks and found serious breaches of hygiene regulations at the trust's hospital sites - the Kent and Sussex, Maidstone, and Pembury.

The commission called for changes to improve the care of patients and the control of infection after more than 1,170 patients were found to be infected with C diff between 2004 and 2006. The report led to a national crackdown on superbugs and C diff being managed as a serious medical condition in its own right, not just a clinical complication.

Head attacks selective 'system of rejection' entering a global economy and working with people from different backgrounds.

Mr Karnavas said a significant number of year seven pupils at the county's grammars will have had a private education, private tuition or parents with the time and resources to coach their children.

He said these children were "not necessarily more able, just better prepared".

He added: "Regrettably, the testing system tends to reward parental affluence as well as, if not more than, a child's ability," he said.

"Grammar schools serve a relatively privileged socio-economic group. Looked-after children, children who have free school meals, students with English as an additional language, ethnic groups, those with special needs and so on, are under represented."

Increasing numbers of parents are hiring private tutors in the hope their child will win a place at grammar school.

Mr Karnavas said: "Some children have private tuition at a ridiculously young age. Some are tutored at 5am, some late at night; some spend the summer holiday being crammed; some are offered cash incentives and some are placed under major strain."

Christine Turner, a teacher from Tunbridge Wells who provides private tutoring, said parents of pupils as young as seven has asked for tutoring for the 11-plus.

"Parents are panicking," she said. "I've had parents of children in infant school ask if I'll tutor them, but I won't do under year five."

She said while some of the children she tutored did feel the pressure, others were confident they would pass.

Mrs Turner also said it was not uncommon for parents to pay private primary school fees as well as for private tutoring.

Bullying

Mr Karnavas acknowledges the decision to have a selective system is a political one made by a democratically elected council and accepts its right to make it, but said the system of testing was seriously flawed.

"Children develop at different rates and times," he said. "Intelligence is not fixed and to pretend to be able to measure it accurately at 10 or 11 is a nonsense."

Martin Frey, of campaign group Stop The Eleven Plus, said: "There is no question grammar schools are excessively middle class, so the claim they aid social mobility is not true."

"What distorts it is not just putting able children in grammars, but at the same time concentrating children with lower aspirations in other schools. Able children are in schools where to be a swot is subject to bullying. It is unbalancing every school."

Cllr Sarah Hohler, KCC's education cabinet member, said: "Kent's 100 secondary schools include foundation trust, faith, grammar, community high, wide ability and academies."

"This offers something for everyone. The vast majority of pupils are doing well and we are working with all our schools to make sure everyone achieves their potential."

"This year alone, more than 11,000 families registered their child for the Kent Test. If we believe in parental choice, we have to listen to what this is telling us. We do not advise coaching or tutoring. However, there is a substantial industry aimed at making parents and children think otherwise."

MOTORISTS have been warned of large price hikes and longer delays if the Government goes ahead with its plan to sell the Dartford crossing.

Prime Minister Gordon Brown wants to raise £16 billion to reduce the Treasury's budget deficit, and this week proposed selling a portfolio of "non-financial assets" – which also includes the Channel Tunnel rail link – over the next two years.

The news has fuelled outrage among road-users who have campaigned for years for the Dartford tolls to be scrapped, and also casts doubts over the future of the proposed new Lower Thames crossing.

There are 53 million crossings through the bridge and tunnel a year. Gordon Telling, of the Tunbridge Wells-based Freight Transport Association, told Kent on Sunday that selling to a private company could hit motorists and businesses hard.

He said: "There would be a monopoly because there's no other way for people to cross the river. What's to say the price of the tolls won't be doubled? There are companies near Dartford with drivers who use the crossing two or three times a day. Any increase would have a big impact on them."

"It's not technically a toll any more – it's a congestion charge. The problem is congestion charges are meant to encourage motorists to go elsewhere, but there's nowhere to go."

Mr Brown's announcement of the proposed sell-off is at odds with a consultation currently being carried out by the Department for Transport, which seeks to find a solution for congestion at the crossing.

A Lower Thames crossing is one possible answer, while earlier this month Transport Minister Sadiq Khan revealed the Government was considering scrapping the tolls for motorists entering Kent via the Queen Elizabeth II bridge.

Mr Telling said: "This region desperately needs another crossing, but if I was an investor planning to buy the existing one I would want a promise that a new one wasn't going to be built. That could compromise the local economy because traffic will only continue to grow."

Crossing sell-off plan fuels drivers' anger

FOR SALE: The Dartford crossing

When the QEII bridge was built in 1991, the Conservative government of the time promised motorists they would no longer be charged to cross the Thames once the cost of the construction had been met.

However, tolls remained once the debt was cleared in 2003 and late last year road-users were hit with increased charges at certain times of the day. Brian Gregory, chairman of the Association of British Drivers, described the proposed sell-off as "absurd".

He added: "The Government clearly doesn't know what it's doing from one week to the next. What are they going to try to sell next, the Isle of Wight? The amount the sale might bring highlights what a money-spinner Dartford is for the Government, despite the promise to drop the tolls once the bridge had been paid for."

"Not only does this Government break its promises, it aims to profit from doing so."

Funds raised from the assets sell-off will help finance new capital investment and pay down debt.

Nationally, the Conservatives say the scheme is "probably necessary", but Tory MPs closer to home are not convinced. Gravesham's Adam Holloway said: "Just last week the Government was considering my suggestion of removing southbound tolls to ease congestion, then a week later decides to sell it off. They've lost all credibility."

The Department for Transport told KoS its consultation on the future of the crossing would run alongside the Treasury's proposal to sell it off. Meanwhile, Eurotunnel put itself forward as a potential buyer for the Channel Tunnel rail link – also known as High Speed One – should it become available.

However, the AFP news agency said the French firm would be unlikely to enter negotiations without a financial partner. It is thought the link could be sold for between £3bn-£4bn.

Experts warn against shooting 'foreign species' out of the sky

There's no need to kill off all the parakeets

PARAKEETS should not be legally killed off in Kent unless it can be proved they are wiping out other native birds, conservationists have warned, writes Steve Knight.

From January, landowners will be able to shoot or poison the common ring-necked species without having to obtain a licence first – sparking fears of a nationwide cull.

There are currently about 40,000 of the colourful birds living in the UK, with Thanet being home to a significant proportion of that number. Many have also spread from London to areas of north-west Kent.

RSPB spokesman Damian Fleming, of the North Kent Marshes team, said the charity would like to see scientific studies of the parakeet's impact in Britain before its protected status is downgraded.

He said: "The RSPB believes in scientific evidence. There are concerns that parakeets can out-compete woodpeckers and starlings, but we haven't seen that to be the case.

"We would like to understand what Defra and Natural England's intentions are. It's hopefully a way of improving the licence system rather than a backdoor way of culling the birds, which we would not support."

Originally from the tropical climes of Africa and Asia, the ring-necked parakeet is now the UK's only naturalised parrot.

While they have been kept as pets since the Victorian era, it is unknown how they began breeding in the wild. Some people believe American guitarist Jimi Hendrix bred and released them when he lived in London during the 1960s, while others think they escaped from the set of 1951 film The African Queen.

According to the London Wildlife Trust, parakeets are now "as British as curry", a comment the Herne Bay-based Wildwood Trust has labelled "spurious". The trust is dedicated to the conservation of Britain's indigenous wildlife, and spokesman Martyn Nicholls said it was right to kill off birds that were proven to be threatening native species: "We're losing enough species as it is, so we should be protecting the ones that are left. It's not as if we can say we have plenty so it doesn't matter."

"When you start to introduce different species to the country, it can cause serious problems. Who would have thought grey squirrels would wipe out the red ones?"

"Sometimes it takes many years to understand the problems new species can create."

According to Natural England, the fact the parakeet has been downgraded does not mean people can kill the birds for no reason.

Landowners must be able to prove they cause significant damage to crops, have a negative impact on native wildlife or are a public health and safety concern or they could still face prison or a £5,000 fine.

Kent Ornithological Society president Don Taylor said he did not think there would be many instances where it would be acceptable to shoot parakeets.

He explained: "I don't think they're having any sort of detrimental effect on the birdlife in the county. I have a feeling this downgrading might make people think it's okay to go out shooting parakeets for no reason, but then again, people who do that sort of thing have no regard for the law anyway."

MP's power play

ERITH and Thamesmead MP John Austin has introduced a new bill in Parliament.

The Equalisation of Tariffs for Gas and Electricity Bill has received cross-party support.

Mr Austin said: "People who use prepay meters often end up paying the very highest tariffs for their fuel – despite being on the very lowest incomes. This is unacceptable and I will now be doing all in my power to ensure this bill becomes law."

Caretaker guilty

A FORMER school caretaker has been given a nine-month suspended sentence for making 143 indecent images of children.

A jury found Roger Brown, 50, of Maidstone, guilty after he denied nine counts of making indecent images of children.

Brown has been ordered to undergo a three-year supervision order, and attend a sex offender treatment programme. His jail sentence is suspended for two years.

Cost of living forces monks to move out

AN ORDER of monks who have lived in Kent for almost 150 years may have to leave the county in search of a cheaper home.

The Benedictine Monks have lived in St Augustine's Abbey, Ramsgate, since it was constructed in 1861, but spiralling repair and maintenance costs are to result in the historic building being put up for sale.

An appeal to raise funds for a new home elsewhere will be launched within weeks.

Dom Paulinus Greenwood, the abbot of St Augustine's, said the 11 monks who live there may not have a choice but to leave the county: "We wanted to get this decision out in the open so people can get used to the idea."

"We've already had some former parishioners in tears because we've been here for almost 150 years. We also ran a school for 130 years and a lot of people have benefited from our teachings."

"It seems like it's all coming to an end, only it's not. We just don't know where we might end up yet. It was a very difficult decision to make, and we've had regular discussions about it for three or four months..."

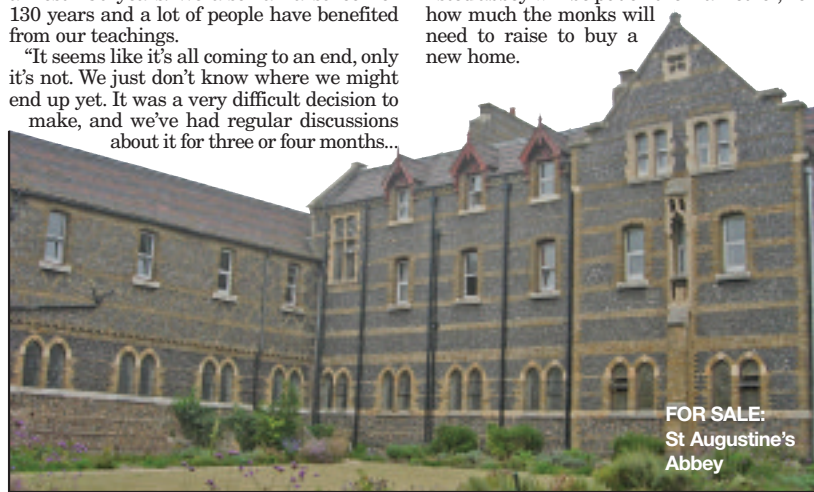

it's not something we've taken lightly.

"But the upkeep of such a large building is problematic. Carrying out work just to make it safe and habitable would cost about three or four million, and that's without the ongoing costs that come after it."

The first monks arrived in Ramsgate from the Italian monastery of Subiaco in 1856, with St Augustine's Abbey built for them by Edward Pugin – son of the renowned Gothic-revival architect Augustus Pugin.

They successfully evangelised much of the coastal region of Kent, establishing all but one of Thanet's existing Catholic parishes, while acting as chaplains to the region's numerous convents of nuns and religious sisters.

It is not yet known how much the Grade-I listed abbey will be put on the market for, nor how much the monks will need to raise to buy a new home.

WHILE some of Kent's MPs have railed against the audit of their expenses, others have expressed their willingness to cough up.

Veteran Tory backbencher Roger Gale, the MP for north Thanet, said the audit by Sir Thomas Legg had been "deeply flawed".

And former Conservative minister Ann Widdecombe, who represents Maidstone and the Weald, questioned the legality of the claim limits set by Sir Thomas.

Meanwhile, Tory frontbencher Greg Clark, the MP for Tunbridge Wells, said he had not been asked to repay any expenses, but had been asked to provide supporting paperwork for his mortgage, which he was happy to do.

Former civil servant Sir Thomas was appointed by Prime Minister Gordon Brown to conduct an independent audit of all MPs' expenses since 2004.

It came after the scandal broke revealing how MPs were claiming for TVs and furniture, and in one famous case a Tory MP who used taxpayers' money to buy a duck house for his lake.

It also emerged that some MPs had 'flipped' their homes to maximise their claims by changing the designation of their second homes.

Queries

This week, Sir Thomas sent letters to MPs asking them to repay thousands of pounds of claims. Some are angry because he has applied his own limits to what he thinks should be paid back.

Ashford's Damian Green, shadow immigration secretary, has been asked to pay back £1,324 on cleaning bills because of the retrospectively imposed limit of £2,000 a year.

He said: "In the interests of helping Parliament concentrate on its proper job and not become stuck discussing expenses, I will of course pay this sum back."

MPs have three weeks to reply to Sir Thomas with any queries over repayment.

Mr Gale, who said he would not reveal the figure he has been asked to pay back until Sir Thomas has responded, said: "I think the whole process is deeply flawed. I don't think retrospection is a good idea and it has hurt a lot of people. I understand the public are angry for various reasons and some people have behaved improperly."

Miss Widdecombe, who is said to have been asked to repay £235 for gardening, said: "What I will say is this; it is unlawful retrospectively to change the law."

Julian Brazier, the Conservative MP for Canterbury, has been asked for £3,635, the majority of which is for claims for Travellers' Club membership. He said he would be challenging the findings.

Derek Wyatt, Labour MP for Sittingbourne and Sheppey, has been asked to pay back £2,893 in second home allowances. He said Sir Thomas had found a number of mistakes in his claims and he was happy to rectify them.

HORAM FEELS TIME IS RIGHT TO LEAVE POLITICS

EXIT RIGHT: John Horam

LONG-serving MP John Horam says he is confident his fellow Conservatives will not suffer as a result of his decision to quit.

The 70-year-old Orpington representative has spent more than 30 years in Parliament – serving as a minister in both Tory and Labour governments – but will not contest his seat at the next general election.

Despite being the 108th MP in the country to quit before polling day, Mr Horam told Kent on Sunday he was confident it would have no bearing on the end result.

He said: "I've done 18 years as an MP for Orpington and it's been a great honour, but I think it's time to stand down and let someone else take over."

"If you're going to make a change then the timing is right at the moment because the Tories are in good shape, and I'm fairly confident whoever replaces me will be elected next year.

"Quite a lot of thought went into the decision because I've enjoyed being an MP. It was a tough call to make but, all things considered, it's the right one."

Mr Horam was first elected in 1970, as the Labour MP for Gateshead West and served as transport minister under Prime Minister Jim Callaghan before joining the breakaway SDP in 1981.

He unsuccessfully fought against Labour for the Newcastle-upon-Tyne Central seat in 1983, but returned to Parliament nine years later as the Conservative MP for Orpington and was later made a health minister by John Major.

Mr Horam said some of his proudest achievements included a successful campaign for a new hospital in Bromley, and another to prevent Orpington hospital being turned into an NHS admin centre.

Mr Horam is the seventh Kent MP to announce he will not contest his seat at the polls.

Fellow Tories Ann Widdecombe (Maidstone and The Weald) and Michael Howard (Folkestone and Hythe) are also stepping down at the next election, as are Labour members Derek Wyatt (Sittingbourne and Sheppey), Howard Stoate (Dartford), Bob Marshall-Andrews (Medway) and John Austin (Erith and Thamesmead).

Labour's Gwyn Prosser, the MP for Dover, has not been asked for repayment, but has to clarify a claim where he paid his brother, who lives in Wales, £650 to fit laminate flooring in his second home in London.

Chatham and Aylesford's Jonathan Shaw, the minister for the South East, said he had not been asked to pay anything back.

Rebel Rochester and Strood Labour MP, Bob Marshall-Andrews refused to discuss the issue. The left-winger claimed £118,000 in expenses to furnish his Rochester flat.

Former transport minister Dr Stephen Ladyman, the MP for Thanet South, has been asked to provide information about mortgage interest he claimed. He said he had "no problem with the process".

Conservative Mid Kent and Faversham MP Hugh Robertson said he had been given the all clear.

Adam Holloway, the MP for Gravesham, has been asked to pay back £1,000 he claimed on council tax during his first year he was elected. His spokeswoman said: "It was a complete and utter oversight and he's absolutely paying it back."

She said Mr Holloway and fellow north Kent MP, Dr Howard Stoate, who was not asked to pay back any expenses by Sir Thomas' audit, were both unhappy at the "unfair" treatment by the local press in their constituencies.

Maintenance

After the expenses scandal broke, Dartford Labour MP Dr Stoate pledged not to claim second home allowances in future and returned his entire claim for 2008-09 of £11,000. It came after the he claimed £55,836 in second home allowances over four years while having no rent or mortgage to pay, for a taxpayer-funded flat in London, which is only 15 miles from his constituency home, the Telegraph reported.

Former Tory leader Michael Howard has refused to reveal whether he has been asked to payback any expenses.

The Folkestone and Hythe MP was caught up in the scandal earlier this year when it was revealed he paid £17,000 over four years for gardening and maintenance at his Lympe home.

Transport minister Paul Clark has been asked to repay £164 for a washing machine he bought four years ago, which he said he would repay.

He said: "We need to do that for the safety of our democratic system; restoring the public and your readers' faith in local politicians."

Mr Clark denies claims he 'flipped' his second home designation – increasing mortgage interest claims from £880 a month to £1,175.

Orpington Tory MP John Horam, who has not been asked to pay anything back, said: "My own view is that they should not only pay the letter of the law, but the spirit of the law."

KCC credit union help for the poor

A COUNTYWIDE credit union has been set up to provide help for people struggling in the recession.

Established by Kent County Council, the Kent Savers service will provide an alternative to loan sharks and unscrupulous lenders who charge exorbitant interest rates.

The union, which will be non-profit-making and run by a voluntary board of directors, will be regulated by the Financial Services Authority and could open as early as this week.

Cabinet member for economic development Cllr Kevin Lynes said the scheme was part of KCC's Backing Kent People campaign.

"Credit unions provide alternatives to the people who turn up on your doorstep with bags of cash and exorbitant interest rates," he said. "When we looked at these organisations, the APR (annual percentage rate) ranged from 299 to 899 per cent. There's even an online company that charges 2,500 per cent."

Targeted

Kent Savers will offer a fixed rate interest of 27 per cent, which Cllr Lynes says is in line with credit unions already operating in Canterbury, Thanet and Medway.

It will offer loans of between £500 and £5,000 and be targeted at residents who cannot guarantee earnings or who have no equity.

It will also provide a bill payment service and flexible and secure saving plans.

Cllr Lynes said Kent Savers would benefit people from across the county, even in towns considered wealthy such as Tunbridge Wells.

Residents will be able to access the Kent Savers service at one of the county's seven Gateways: Ashford, Dover, Maidstone, Tenterden, Margate, Tonbridge and Tunbridge Wells. A website has also been set up at www.kentcreditunion.org.uk.

Departing churchman laments erosion of BBC's religious content

Godless and thoughtless

CHURCH leaders have condemned BBC Radio Kent's decision to axe the religion and ethics feature Thought for the Day from its Saturday slot, writes Jenna Pudelek.

Dr Stephen Venner, the out-going Bishop of Dover and Bishop in Canterbury, said religious coverage on the station was "disappearing and being watered down".

The final straw came when it was announced the two-minute Thought for the Day segment was to be dropped from the Saturday breakfast show.

In an open letter to Paul Leaper, managing editor of BBC Radio Kent, Dr Venner laments the fact that 10 years ago the programme used to feature daily and was broadcast twice during the breakfast show from Monday to Friday.

"We're not making a special Christian or Church of England appeal. Thought for the Day is not even particularly religious in the sense you have to attend a church or mosque to listen. It's about keeping that moral dimension in our lives," Dr Venner said.

The so-called 'God-slot' is also a regular feature on BBC Radio 4's Today programme and gives religious leaders the opportunity to reflect on a topical message.

In January, Ariane Sherine gave the first atheist Thought for the Afternoon on the iPM show on Radio 4. Dr Venner would not comment on whether atheists should be allowed to contribute, but said: "With Thought for the Day, locally and nationally, you cannot say people have been sectarian. The whole point has been to speak to everybody while they are making breakfast or on their way to work. Thousands wrote in to Radio 4 to complain when it was being considered for the axe, which shows people appreciate it who do not go to church; they are just thinking people. It's a moment of peace in what are by nature very busy programmes, a chance to think about the deeper meaning of life."

OUTSPOKEN: Dr Stephen Venner

axe the Saturday slot. The panel had not been told and he was "quite put out", he said.

"We expressed our concern and amazement that Thought for the Day had been taken away," said Fr McGreal, who has been involved with the station for 20 years.

"It always fitted into the programme; it wasn't just parachuted in. It wasn't too heavy and formal. It was conversational, about developing on issues that provoke people into a better way of living."

He agreed with Dr Venner that religious broadcasting had been reduced on Radio Kent in recent years.

"There are many on the station who are really committed to faith, presenters and producers," Fr McGreal said. "But the manager driving the agenda feels he has to have everything '2010'. A lot of the things have been moved around." The station was losing its understanding of the community, he said.

Dr Venner, who retires on November 28, said: "The BBC is a public service broadcaster. Everybody pays the licence fee, so it ought to reflect all that is best in society, as well as the bad things. All that is best comes from people of faith and goodwill, people who are volunteers, people who have good ideas. The two minutes when they get their say is now in danger of being cut, so I thought it was the right time to say something."

Commitment

A BBC official said: "While this item is not currently included in Saturday breakfast, we can assure the Bishop and our audience our commitment to discussing religious affairs and moral issues is not restricted to Thought for the Day."

"Our Saturday show has been brought more in line with our Weekday Breakfast programme, which since its re-launch has substantially increased its coverage of these issues without restricting them to a specific slot."

"BBC Kent has a religious and communities producer who brings religious and ethical stories to a range of programmes across the week and weekends. We will continue to reflect the county's vibrant religious communities ensuring they play an important part in our overall output."

SPLIT APART: Roger Gale laid a wreath during his trip to the 'Berlin Wall' of Cyprus

Obama 'doesn't know what he's talking about'

BARACK Obama has been asked by a veteran Tory MP to keep his nose out of foreign affairs he does not fully understand, writes Steve Knight.

Earlier this year the US President called for Turkey to be accepted into the European Union as soon as possible – something North Thanet representative Roger Gale believes should not yet be allowed to happen.

Since 1974 the Turkish Army has occupied large parts of Cyprus, and last weekend the Conservative stalwart attended a rally in the municipality of Morphou to support a protest against its continued presence.

Mr Gale said that until the military is ordered out of the region, Turkey should not even be considered for EU membership.

He said: "Barack Obama recently went to Turkey and said he thought the EU should hurry up and let them join.

"Now forgive me, but he clearly doesn't understand the situation and I think what he said was completely out of order.

"The Turks now occupy fully a third of the island of Cyprus, and they do so with the tacit agreement of the Americans, who see them as a key ally.

"Therefore if Obama wants to see them join the EU it's in his power to do something about it.

"I just don't think he has grasped the situation, and the EU has pretty much told him to mind his own business."

Following a failed attempt to overthrow the Cypriot government and join the island with Greece in 1974, Turkey – who had agreed along with Britain and Greece to defend the territory of the republic – launched an invasion.

Within weeks the Turks had gained control of more than a third of the island, resulting in the deaths and disappearances of thousands of men and women – the majority of them Greek Cypriot.

To this day the Turkish government refuses to reveal the locations of mass graves, and a large wall complete with barbed wire and machine-gun posts separates the Greek Cypriot governed south from the Turkish Cypriot north.

The Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus is only officially recognised by Turkey.

Mr Gale said: "There is a small but significant population of Greek and Turkish Cypriots living in Thanet – I would guess between 500 and 1,000 – and this is an issue that matters a great deal to many of them.

"I think successive British governments have acted quite shamefully over this because we should have done more.

"The EU is reviewing the situation in December and I shall be raising the matter in the House of Commons before then.

"The Berlin Wall is still alive and well in Cyprus, and I think it's an absolute disgrace."

Chinese refuse talks

THE exiled Dalai Lama has a new ally in his attempts to return to Tibet before he dies.

Sittingbourne and Sheppey MP Derek Wyatt was one of four members of the All Party Parliamentary China Group who visited Tibet and Beijing last week in an attempt to help the Chinese government resolve a dispute lasting more than 50 years.

The current Dalai Lama – Tenzin Gyatso – fled to India following a failed uprising in March, 1959, and has not been allowed to return home since.

Mr Wyatt and his colleagues were invited by the Chinese government, but the Labour member said his suggestions on how to end the row were largely ignored.

He said: "On the Dalai Lama I suggested they borrow from the examples of the IRA, the Palestinians, the Tamils and the ANC, by asking a third party to help them resolve the issue in confidence.

"The Chinese authorities saw this as a sign of weakness that they couldn't solve this themselves, whereas I kept saying to them it was a sign of strength and maturity. "But alas my thoughts fell on stony ground."

In addition to its Dalai Lama agenda, the delegation also wanted to examine the reality of whether Tibet was truly an autonomous region within China.

Mr Wyatt said he was particularly interested in finding out the fate of monks missing during the civil unrest last year, but that its members' questions drew a blank each time.

Raise your glass to being aware

FROM Monday Kent is taking part in Alcohol Awareness Week to highlight how easy it is to drink more than the recommended weekly amount.

During the week, staff from the Kent Drug and Alcohol Action Team will be stopping off in towns across the county to offer passers-by free non-alcoholic 'mocktails'.

They can also have a go at 'beer goggles', which simulate drunkenness, and guess the number of units in a series of drinks.

The week will culminate with a car simulator test, which shows what happens when people drink and drive after just a few drinks.

The Urban Blue activity bus will be travelling to Sheerness, Dartford, Dover, Ramsgate, Maidstone and Tunbridge Wells.

FAST RESPONSE: Frontline officers are receiving medical training to help at emergencies

Police's new training will save lives

MEDICAL training which was first given to elite SAS soldiers is helping Kent Police save lives at emergency scenes.

Officers who are likely to be first to respond to a call in which someone has suffered injuries are being trained to offer assistance before they can be handed over to medical professionals.

The training programme is based around that given to military special forces operating behind enemy lines and out of the reach of medics.

"Their objective is to keep people alive for seven days – ours is to keep them going for about 30 minutes," said Tactical Unit manager Paul Abdey who works one day a week as an ambulance man as well as running the police training.

The scheme is about to be rolled out nationwide following a decision by the Association of Chief Police Officers who have seen how successfully it is working among Kent's frontline officers.

As part of our A Safer Kent Campaign, reporter NICK AMES finds out how the county's police officers are learning another new skill to help save lives in an emergency

As well as the military background, it has been designed to incorporate elements devised by the USA's Department of Homeland Security which is applied to Special Weapons and Tactics (SWAT) teams.

The major factor is training police officers

QUESTION: Do CCTV and Asbos really make a difference or are they just ways of appearing to tackle a problem?

Julia Hawes (Sheppey)

ANSWER: Anti-Social Behaviour Orders (Asbos) are just one of a number of methods we can use to help to reduce problem behaviour within our communities. But before we apply for an Asbo a great deal of preventative work is done with local authorities and other partners to address the issues that have been identified. Both overt and covert CCTV are excellent examples of how evidence can be captured, or used as a deterrent, to stop such behaviour.

QUESTION: In view of the positive benefits in the perception of the police and the proven improved relationship/respect between motorcyclists and police (see national press over much of the UK) as well as the benefit to motorcyclists improving their road skills and thereby potentially lowering accidents, will you be supporting BikeSafe next year after suspending it in 2009?

Gary, Ashford

ANSWER: BikeSafe is still considered highly beneficial and Kent Police are intending to deliver this scheme to specifically identified vulnerable riders who would benefit from improving their safety skills. Details about this revised scheme will be published in the near future.

QUESTION: Surely more police on the streets would be the answer to drugs, drunkenness and knife crime and make the public feel a bit better protected.

Patricia Burton, Folkestone

ANSWER: Drugs, drunkenness and knife crime are just a few of the areas we are tackling through direct police action. We also work closely with our partners in education and the licensing trade to resolve these issues. There are often many ways to solve a problem and the work of my officers on the ground, coupled with partnership working, is very effective.

It has long been recognised that the visible presence of police officers on patrol reassures the public. Since 2006, when Kent Police introduced dedicated Neighbourhood Teams, there has been a greater police presence than ever before on our streets. Police Community Support Officers are part of those Neighbourhood Teams and they actively patrol local areas to reassure the community and deter criminality and anti-social behaviour.

One of my ambitions for the force is to work to make people feel safer, and local neighbourhood officers would like to hear from people who have particular concerns so they can intervene and work to find a solution.

The front counter staff at your local police station or the telephonist, if you 'phone in, will be only too pleased to give you the full contact details for your local neighbourhood officer. This information can also be found on the internet and at public libraries. Please get in touch and help us help you with the problems in your area.

QUESTION: Can you explain why for many years your officers have allowed hundreds of speeding motorcyclists to use the roads in and out of Tenterden every summer weekend as a virtual TT course. Not only are they a menace to themselves, but to pedestrians and all other road users as well.

I have complained to the previous holder of your position, but nothing was ever done and I certainly have never seen a speed trap on our local roads. Steps should, in my view, be taken now to prepare a rude awakening for these lawless idiots in time for next summer.

Peter Lake, Tenterden

ANSWER: Kent Police take the issue of speeding motorcyclists very seriously. In the Ashford district, which includes Tenterden, this important issue is treated as a priority in a number of wards following feedback from the PACT (Partners and Communities Together) processes in both rural and urban areas.

The subject of speeding motorcyclists forms part of our daily business and is incorporated into our 'You Said, We Did' information campaigns.

Since the beginning of last month 26 rural road checks have been completed in the Tenterden area, resulting in 46 drivers being dealt with for a variety of offences. In addition a specialist motorbike team patrols areas where problems are identified and provides advice to riders. Their role specifically focuses on reducing the number of people killed and seriously injured on our roads, but also addresses anti-social behaviour by riders.

QUESTION: I was relieved to hear that the decaying monstrosity that is the old police headquarters is to be finally pulled down this month. There have been false dawns before, but a new building site near it suggests someone is hopeful that some planning for the future, in this downturn, is being made. Perhaps a developer can move in and kick-start the stalled development opposite: there are surely opportunities to still catch private homeowners seeking affordable homes outside London.

I was only thinking last week that without any clear demarcation and with broken windows everywhere that a compensation claim was coming the council tax payers' way. Indeed the local children, maybe in anticipation of some cleared ground that will serve as a football pitch, tennis grounds (at least in the interim please) or park (indeed) have taken to climbing on the roofs of late. I believe owners are responsible for the welfare of the trespasser.

My question then to Chief Constable Michael Fuller is whether there is a plan beyond the demolition. As keepers of our social fabric I trust there is a well thought out time-line; that in particular once the rubble is cleared there is no chance that anything undesirable will fill the void.

If nothing is mapped out and a concretised parking lot is all that is anticipated in the not too distant may I implore you to consider the surely cheap, socially cohesive (in this corrosive environment) option of sports grounds for the youngsters.

Lee McCulloch, Rochester

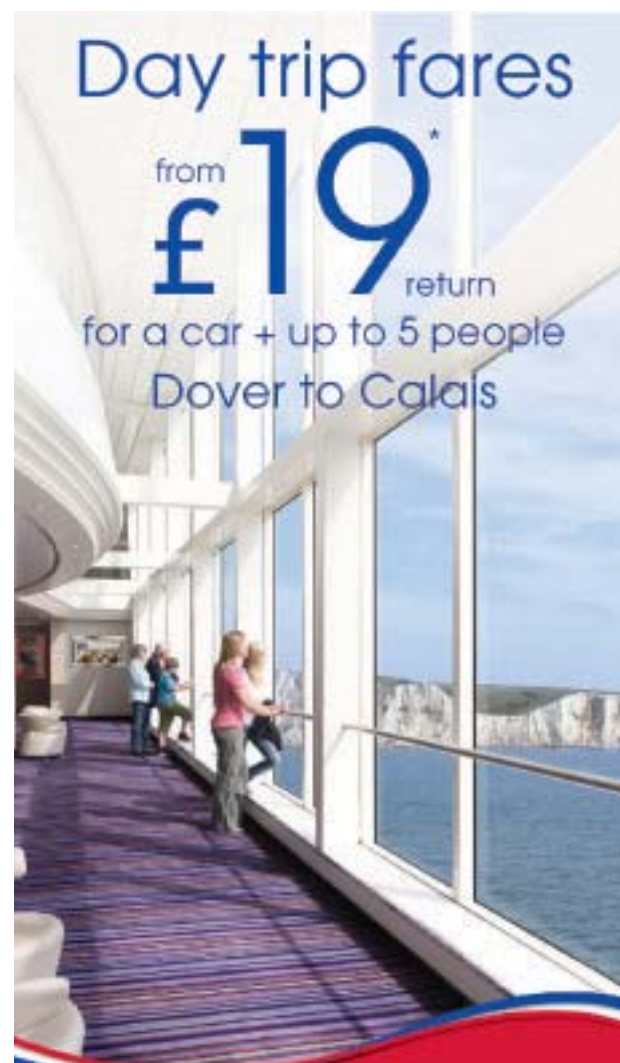

ANSWER: The Kent Police Authority has obtained outline planning permission for the redevelopment of the former Rochester Police Station with a scheme of houses and flats.

However the poor economic climate, which has particularly affected demand for residential redevelopment sites, means the authority has not been able to transform the former police station in this way.

The authority has therefore decided to demolish the vacant building as this will save the substantial costs associated with retaining a redundant building, and it will also deal with the concerns of residents about public safety.

If the market for residential development land continues to improve it is hoped to offer the site for sale in mid 2010.

who are part of the firearms unit, responsible for crowd control or likely to attend road traffic accidents. They are taught how to deal with trauma injuries and bleeding and are equipped with defibrillators, tourniquets and blood clotting agents developed for treating wounded soldiers in Afghanistan.

Mr Abdey explained the reasons behind the training.

He said: "There has always been this void in certain situations. If police throw up a cordon around, say, a firearms incident medical personnel are not permitted to breach it. Therefore it is up to police themselves to treat people who have been injured.

"So the unit was set up to train police officers in treating the injuries that are predictable at major incidents. The officers trained are the first who would respond to such an incident, but they would also need their skills in incidents we ourselves have created – such as a cordon around a building."

The police are trained to the level of an ambulance technician in their specialist areas.

Mr Abdey said: "These are around trauma injuries such as shooting or knifing and heavy bleeding. I am confident that there are situations in the past where people have unfortunately died where that would not be the result today. The training really does save lives."

Cost of care is galloping out of reach for horses

By JENNA PUDELEK

jenna.pudelek@kosmedia.co.uk

AN ANIMAL sanctuary that cares for some of the most seriously abused and damaged horses in country is "struggling desperately" due to the recession.

Sara Ross, who owns the Horse Refuge in Wittersham, near Tenterden, said financial pressures were forcing people to give up their horses. Some were bringing them to her for re-homing, or even just turning them loose without food or water.

She said the centre needed a miracle to survive the winter, with running costs of around £2,000 a week needed to keep the yard going.

With postal workers threatening nationwide industrial action next week, Mrs Ross fears if strikes go ahead postal donations will dry up completely.

"We are struggling desperately at the moment," she said. "The recession has made it a lot worse. The costs to run the stables, food and bedding prices have gone up and donations have all but dried up."

"Winter is always a bad time and we are scared for this winter."

"Figures for slaughter have gone

IN NEED: The fire brigade have to be called to help Dandy Boy back to his feet because the centre cannot afford to buy the equipment needed up and many of these are horses being slaughtered unnecessarily in vast numbers for pet food."

Animal welfare charity the Blue Cross, which runs three equine centres, said it had seen a "marked increase" in horses and ponies being handed over to its refuges for financial reasons.

At the end of last year when the credit crunch was beginning to bite, more than 80 per cent of requests for the charity to take horses involved financial difficulties.

Mrs Ross said: "People are bringing them to places like us, but there are also horses just being turned loose in fields. I believe all animals are suffering, but horses are more expensive to look after."

No horses are turned away from the refuge and it currently has 50 permanent residents, described as "beautiful and fantastic", but too badly abused to be re-homed.

One such example is Dandy Boy, who has recently started collapsing and Mrs Ross needs to buy expensive equipment so staff can get him to his feet, rather than having to keep calling firefighters.

It won't kill you to wait

PLAY IT SAFE: In September alone five people were killed on the country's level crossings

THE golden rule when driving across railway lines with a train coming is to remember it is never going to give way to the motorist, writes Chris Murphy.

Yet shockingly, there are drivers in Kent who think just that if they approach a crossing and hear a train horn.

Others think the train will slow down to allow drivers over, and some drivers say they never bother checking the crossing's red lights before speeding through.

Another major excuse given by drivers is that they don't bother stopping until the barriers actually come down far enough to stop the car getting underneath.

Network Rail said it is shocked and appalled at some of the excuses it hears from motorists when they fail to obey all the signals at level crossings.

Drivers jump the lights and even weave round barriers, both of which are illegal as well as incredibly dangerous.

Yet they continue to flout the law and risk lives to save a few minutes on their journey. Now Network Rail has launched a Don't Run the Risk level crossing awareness campaign for the autumn, and is urging drivers to take responsibility for their crazy actions at crossings.

Between January and August this year, five motorists and five pedestrians in Kent have narrowly avoided a potentially fatal collision with a train at the county's 320 crossings. It is running at three near-misses a week nationally.

In that time, across the UK, there have been nine collisions and seven deaths. And then in September, there was five more deaths in one month alone.

The Kent incidents involving vehicles were at Chandlers, Birchington; Bow Hill, Watlington; Queens Farm Road, Shorne-mead near Higham; A228 at Grain; and Simmonds, Minnis Bay. The crossings with incidents involving pedestrians were Milner Court footpath, Sturry; Bow Hill, Watlington; Pilgrims Way, near Otford; between Ham Street and Ashford International; and Cut End, between Minster and Sturry.

A survey found a shocking 45 per cent of people had no idea what to do at a level crossing.

Iain Coucher, Network Rail chief executive, said: "The rules around level crossings are clear and simple. When the lights flash or the barriers are down, don't cross."

"Signs asking users to stop, look and listen or reminding you to contact the signaller before crossing are clear and must be followed. We understand that people have busy lives and waiting can be frustrating."

"Our campaign asks 'would it kill you to wait?' because sadly we know that not waiting can result in tragedy – and there's no excuse for that."

A RAPIST whose victims included a widowed pensioner has finally been jailed, more than 20 years after his brutal attacks.

Stephen Johnstone, 50, from Scotland, thought he had got away with his crimes – the

CAUGHT: Rapist Stephen Johnstone has been jailed

Jenny Thrower said: "Johnstone's offences were particularly brutal, leaving both victims badly traumatised and suffering significant after-effects, even until today."

"It is right that he should be held to account for his crimes, and that a menace to society should be taken from our streets."

A convicted burglar, Johnstone committed his first rape on a 62-year-old Bexleyheath pensioner after breaking into her house while she was sleeping, on September 13, 1989.

Following the attack, he stole jewellery including a wedding ring that belonged to her late husband.

Just over a month later, on the afternoon of October 23, Johnstone forced his way into a 25-year-old woman's home in Barnet, Hertfordshire, before beating her unconscious and raping her. He then stole more jewellery and cash before leaving.

An investigation was launched immediately following the crimes, which police were able to link using DNA evidence left at both locations.

However, despite local media appeals and efts supplied by both victims, they were unable to track down who was responsible.

DNA database

The trail went cold until last year, when the Met's cold case team used the latest technology to upgrade its DNA database and review historic crimes. This led them to Johnstone, who had earlier provided a sample after being stopped for drink driving, this sample matched traces left at the homes of his rape victims.

He was arrested at his home in first of which occurred in Bexleyheath in 1989 – but advances in DNA technology led to police finally tracking him down.

On Monday he received sentences of nine years for rape, four years for burglary and three for actual bodily harm, to run concurrently.

Det Con

Justice finally done, 20 years after rapes

Montrose, Angus, on April 21 and charged the next day. Despite denying the offences initially, Johnstone later pleaded guilty to two counts of rape, plus one each of robbery, burglary and ABH.

DC Thrower said: "This case shows the Metropolitan Police will do everything possible to make sure offenders are brought to justice – regardless of when the crime was committed."

Advances in technology have led to countless criminals being tracked down long after their crimes were carried out.

Kent Police's cold case team secured its first conviction in August last year when 46-year-old customs officer Kelvin Bennett was found guilty of the rape and kidnap of a 21-year-old Folkestone woman eight years earlier.

He was jailed for 12 years.

STAR: June Jailer spent three days filming

Hospice cashes in on gifts from attic

BBC show Cash in the Attic has been filmed in Kent, with a hospice reaping the rewards.

June Jailer from Walmer, recently lost her husband Mike, but his final days were made more comfortable as a day-patient at the Pilgrims Hospice in Canterbury.

She wanted to give something back, and it was her son David who came up with the idea of getting in touch with the BBC show where people's hidden gems are taken to auction.

Her attic has been an Aladdin's Cave of hidden treasures, but she was persuaded to clear it out to raise vital funds for the hospice.

The mother and son were filmed taking a tour of the buildings, meeting staff, and handing over the cheque.

June said: "Mike would have wanted me to do this. Before he died he had started to sort through his belongings and wanted to sell some to raise money for the hospices."

And there were plenty of collectables to go under the hammer, including rings, crockery and clocks, raising over £1,000.

The hospice, opened in 1982 by the Queen, said the cash will go towards the purchase of a new reclining chair for day hospice patients.

June said: "Mike had problems with his back because of his illness and found these chairs incredibly comfortable, so I would like other people to benefit in the way he did."

The hospice provides palliative care free of charge to people in east Kent with a range of illnesses that cannot be cured, including cancer, heart failure, respiratory conditions and neurological diseases, costing £8 million a year. The Pilgrims Hospice episode will be screened on Friday at 11.30am on BBC1.

Physicist with his eye on technology

PIONEERING research conducted at the University of Kent could help change the way doctors approach eye diseases such as glaucoma, writes Steve Knight.

Romanian-born physicist Professor Adrian Podoleanu has developed a unique method of combining laser technology with 3D imaging to aid the early diagnosis and treatment of such conditions.

His work is so highly regarded it has been held up by the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council (EPSRC) as an example of how the study of physics can benefit society in general.

Prof Podoleanu told Kent on Sunday the university could potentially benefit in a big way from his breakthrough.

He explained: "There are three key stages to my work – one is to carry out the research, two is to teach it to students because we need to create specialists, and three is to take it outside the university and exploit it commercially."

"I think the university realises there is something in this technology, and that's why we've been able to protect it by writing several patents for it."

"Over time if it does become fully commercialised, which we think it will, then the university will feel the benefits of it."

Prof Podoleanu's work centres around two visual imaging techniques known as adaptive optics and optical coherence tomography (OCT), the latter of which was also pioneered at the University of Kent (UKC).

Adaptive optics is laser technology that was originally used to allow astronomers to see sharper images of stars, while OCT is effectively 'optical ultrasound' that captures reflections from within thin tissue to provide high-quality 3D images.

The advancement can also be applied to a number of other fields, including dentistry and art conservation.

Prof Podoleanu said: "This is about an imaging technology whose potential is still not fully exploited, and the years to come will see its expansion to fields outside ophthalmology [study and treatment of visual diseases]."

TECHNIQUE: Professor Adrian Podoleanu

"We are fully engaged in evaluating its value for microscopy, where we expect to enhance our abilities in visualising cells, embryos and study materials."

The EPSRC is the Government's leading funding agency for research and training in engineering and physics.

It included Prof Podoleanu's work in its latest publication entitled Optics and Photonics: Physics Enhancing Our Lives, which was jointly sponsored by the Institute of Physics.

Professor Paul Strange – head of UKC's school of physical sciences – said: "This development is an excellent example of physics working for the good of society."

"I am very pleased Prof Podoleanu's research has been recognised by the research councils and the Institute of Physics."

SOCIAL care policies unveiled at the main party conferences have sparked a fresh public debate.

That has been welcomed at County Hall in Maidstone and director of adult social services, Oliver Mills, said it was important people of all ages got involved in the debate over how social care will be funded and provided in future.

The Government has said the current system, designed in 1948, is "not fit for purpose".

Mr Mills agreed, and said Kent County Council was doing its best to make it work, but by 2021 the number of people aged over 85 in Kent will be rising by 6,200 per year.

"The important thing is not to wait," he said. "Radical thinking is required for that level of change and for people to get out what they expect and need."

"There are demographic increases and pressure in public finances. The demographic time bomb is with us already. It is urgent and something needs to change."

In the face of huge demographic changes – the Government says by 2026 1.7 million more people will need care and support – and with a predicted £6 billion black hole in the social care budget, the Department of Health is consulting on a Green Paper that proposes options for future funding.

It's not just older people who receive support from social services, it is also adults who have, for example, learning difficulties and physical disabilities.

The discussion document, Shaping the Future of Care Together, lists funding options and outlines proposals for a National Care System. People have until November 13 to respond.

Benefit

At the Labour conference in Brighton, Prime Minister Gordon Brown announced that elderly people with the highest levels of need would be given free personal care so they could stay in their own homes, from October, next year. This would cost an estimated £670m and benefit 350,000 people.

However, Mr Mills pointed out the Government ruled out a tax-funded option when the Green Paper was published in the summer.

Health think-tank The King's Fund raised concerns that if the extra funds were not ring-fenced there was a danger local authorities would have a "perverse incentive" to encourage people into residential care, which they would have to pay for themselves.

At their party conference in Manchester, the Tories unveiled plans for a home protection scheme aiming to prevent older people being forced to use their own assets to fund their care in later life.

The scheme would involve a voluntary, one-off £8,000 payment into an insurance scheme, which is similar to the voluntary insurance scheme laid out in the Government's Green Paper.

But Mr Mills voiced concerns that people

Everyone urged to join in social care policy debate could end up going into residential care simply because they had paid into the scheme.

"Both schemes have raised a debate, which is the important thing," he said. "The options are out there and people are talking, which is very welcome."

Mr Mills said it was unclear whether the Government would publish a White Paper on the proposals before the general election or whether each party would use the consultation to shape their manifestos on social care.

"Looking at specifics, the National Care Service needs a lot more thought about what that actually means and the extent to which services reflect local need," he said.

"Kent's view is we would be very keen for an opportunity to test out how it would all work."

Under the current system, local authorities assess people's need on a four-point scale, which has led to a postcode lottery developing in terms of how much families have to fork out for care. People with assets worth more than £23,000 must pay for their own residential care costs, which means many older people are forced to sell their homes.

Bloom takes role of Unicef's leading man

CANTERBURY-born movie actor Orlando Bloom has become a goodwill ambassador for children's organisation Unicef.

The Pirates of the Caribbean star said his work will help poor children and raise awareness of the organisation.

The 32-year-old's first task will be to film an appeal about the importance of clean water supplies.

Stars who have held the ambassador role before him include Audrey Hepburn, Sir Roger Moore, David Beckham, Jackie Chan, Mia Farrow and Vanessa Redgrave.

A former pupil of St Edmund's School in Canterbury, Bloom has already been doing work for Unicef.

From a humble start – Bloom started his acting career in three episodes of BBC's Casualty – he landed the part of Legolas in Lord of the Rings just two days after graduating from the Guildhall School of Music and Drama in London, then he appeared in the hit film Black Hawk Down.

He went on to become one of the world's most popular male celebrities thanks to his boyish good looks, and has picked up a host of titles like 'most desirable date' and 'most attractive' by a mass of style magazines.

But Orlando has refused to become simple a good looking icon, and made it known two years ago that he wanted to support Unicef as an active ambassador.

He has campaigned in Australia to get support for victims of this year's bushfires, and has already been on Unicef missions to Moscow and Sarajevo.

STAR TURN: Bloom during trip to Nepal

Bloom said: "Unicef doesn't just deliver humanitarian aid, which is what they are known for all over the world.

"They also educate and provide tools which help women and children face challenges specific to their own lives.

"I responded to how Unicef works as much as I did to the work itself."

Unicef's executive director, Ann Veneman, said: "Advocacy from Unicef Goodwill Ambassadors helps build momentum to improve the lives of children around the world. We are proud to have Orlando Bloom as one of the strong voices for vulnerable children."

During a trip to Nepal he visited schools in the remote western districts of Kaski and Chitwan, two of the poorest areas of the country and performed a small role in local school radio production.

Go Gorilla crazy at Howletts & Port Lympne Wild Animal Parks this October!

It's October which means Gorilla Month at Howletts and Port Lympne Wild Animal Parks in Kent. Throughout the month both parks will be going giddy over gorillas with a range of gorilla-themed special events taking place everyday!

Howletts and Port Lympne house the world's largest collection of gorillas in human care – with 78 Western Lowland gorillas between the two parks. This half term, children and adults are invited to hear talks from the expert keepers about the parks most famous residents as part of a month of gorilla-themed activities. As well as hearing all about the lives of the gorillas at the parks, visitors can learn about the vital conservation work carried out by the parks through The Aspinall Foundation, which seeks to stop the rapid decline of critically endangered Western Lowland gorilla numbers.

With fewer than 100,000 Western Lowland gorillas left in the world, their extinction is a real possibility by 2020 if numbers continue to decline at the present rate. Through their consistent rescue and rehabilitation projects in Africa, the parks have overseen the release of more than 50 wild-born gorillas—all orphans of the bush-meat trade—into protected areas in the Congo and Gabon. As part of their commitment to breeding endangered species, the parks have also reintroduced 10 hand-reared gorillas born at the Kent parks to their ancestral homes, including the successful introduction of 3 gorillas last summer to the national park in Gabon.

Gorillas spend over 30% of the day eating, and visitors will have the chance to witness their natural foraging behaviour that Gorillas display when receiving their feeds. Peckish guests can head to the park's restaurant and dining area to curb their own appetites – with each kids meal coming with a free gorilla mask to add a bit of the wild into the dining experience!

As if this isn't enough, every day one lucky visitor (over 7 years old) will win the chance to take part in a gorilla feed by being named as the Golden Ticket winner of the day.* On arrival every child will be given a free goodie bag, packed full of activities to excite their curiosity in gorillas. From colouring sheets to puzzles, gorilla craft sessions to free gifts there'll be more than enough to keep everyone happy this Gorilla month!

And, for a limited time only, you'll be able to book online to save 20% on your ticket price offer ends on 31st October.*

Singer is torn by Jess' plight

By CHRIS MURPHY
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

POPSTAR Natalie Imbruglia has appeared in a concert to raise funds for a girl desperate for a double lung transplant.

Seriously ill Jess Wales, 20, from Westgate in Thanet, suffers from cystic fibrosis. But that hasn't stopped her winning hearts with her determination to survive.

The singer performed an acoustic set at the Save Jess-tival show held in Shoreditch, east London, on Friday.

It was to raise awareness of organ donation because even today, the number of people needing transplants far outstrips the availability of organs.

Jess is fighting for her life with just 11 per cent of her lung capacity left. She has waited more than four years for the operation, despite being told she would be dead in 24 months.

She met the Aussie singer last year, and the celebrity was deeply moved. The 34-year-old said: "I told her to let me know if there was every anything I could do to help."

"I was sad to learn Jess is now so ill and so was delighted to be asked to take part in this gig."

Others who have offered Jess their support include the Prime Minister's wife Sarah Brown, comedians Dara O Briain, Bill Bailey, David Baddiel and Phil Jupitus, TV presenter Jonathan Ross and Limp Bizkit singer Fred Durst.

Jess has been running an internet campaign to encourage more people to sign up to donate their organs in the event of an accident so some good can come from tragedy.

Recently Jess attempted to complete 20 per cent of the 5km Adidas Challenge run in London's Hyde Park by walking, but her condition is so bad she was unable to finish.

She relies on an oxygen supply 24 hours a day and a non-invasive ventilator to keep her lungs going when they regularly start to tire.

Jess said: "A lung transplant for me will be literally life changing."

A recent survey found 80 per cent of people agree with donating their organs, but a mere 25 per cent have actually done anything about it and signed up.

See www.savejess.org.uk.

Tourists to investigate links with super sleuth

By CHRIS MURPHY

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

THE release of the controversial new Sherlock Holmes movie that was partly filmed in Kent is set to spark a tourist stampede.

Madonna's former husband Guy Ritchie is the man behind the new film about the super sleuth. But despite not being released until Christmas Day, it has already drawn criticism from traditionalists for its new all-action look.

The film stars Robert Downey Jr as the detective, with Jude Law as his sidekick Watson. Both are known as real-life hell-raisers, and the pair continue that style on screen too, with epic explosions and punch ups.

The film coincides with the 150th anniversary of the birth of the detective's creator, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

Tourism chiefs are now hoping the film will inspire visitors to flock to Kent locations linked to Conan Doyle.

Members of the cast and crew stayed at the Bridgewood Manor Hotel in Chatham, and some of the more explosive scenes were shot at Chatham's historic dockyard. But the author himself also has links with towns in the county, including Dover, Margate, and Whitstable.

Sandra Matthews-Marsh, chief executive of Visit Kent, said: "We are delighted that one of our great attractions, the Historic Dockyard Kent economy and we are fortunate the council is fully supportive with its film office."

Kevin Lynes, cabinet member for regeneration and economic development at KCC said the office has so far generated £13 million of business for Kent.

Conan Doyle lived between 1859 and 1930 and had plenty of connections with the county. Groombridge Place Gardens and its Enchanted Forest were the inspiration for Birlstone Manor in 1915's The Valley of Fear.

When Doyle wrote the book he was living nearby at Crowborough and was a frequent visitor to the 17th-century moated manor.

During World War Two, Conan Doyle's daughter Lena was the admin officer at the secret listening station at RAF West Kingsdown.

In Margate, the author wrote cryptically about a local woman in the short story, The Adventure of the Second Stain.

The author investigated spiritualism and a haunting at the Old Oak Cottage in High Street, Minster, near Ramsgate.

Despite killing off Holmes in 1893, to massive public outrage, there were eventually four novels and 56 short stories, including three using Canterbury. Not all of them were by Doyle, but another writer called Miles Elward.

One was Sherlock Holmes in Canterbury, and another called The Missing Cleric.

England's oldest parish church still in constant use, St Martin's in Canterbury, was used in The Ball of Twine.

For more details and an itinerary for the Conan Doyle tour, visit www.visitkent.co.uk.

ALL-ACTION: Robert Downey Jr and Jude Law play the latest incarnation of Holmes and Watson in the film partly shot in Medway Chatham, was chosen as one of the locations for the new Sherlock Holmes film.

"Kent has so many other strong links to the great author that will interest visitors, and to celebrate this, Visit Kent has produced a three-day Sherlock Holmes itinerary, based on the Kent connections. Not only is this appealing to set-jettlers but tour operators developing packages for next year have shown interest."

Phonecall helps to save woman

AN emergency operator helped an elderly woman escape a blaze at her home.

Kent Fire and Rescue's Natalie Pavey took the call from a distressed woman at around 10pm on Tuesday. A fire had broken out in her living room and she was trapped in her home in Moss End Mews, Ramsgate.

Firefighters believe the cause of the blaze was a discarded cigarette.

Watch manager Emma Reilly said: "Natalie told her to keep low and gave her other survival tips but mainly tried to calm the lady until crews arrived."

Crews from Thanet attended the blaze and firefighters found the woman, believed to be in her late 60s or early 70s, in the back garden. She was taken to hospital suffering from smoke inhalation.

Museum to get £2m lotto boost

A MUSEUM has been awarded nearly £2 million by the Heritage Lottery Fund.

Maidstone Museum and Bentrif Art Gallery said the funds would be used for its East Wing project, which will create a new entrance, improve visitor facilities and upgrade exhibition spaces.

A new education suite will also be added along with wheelchair access to the galleries at the museum, which boasts a collection of 660,000 objects ranging from a 2,700-year-old Egyptian mummy to bronzes by the modernist sculptor Henry Moore.

Maidstone Museum opened in 1858 and part of it is housed in a Grade-II listed Tudor mansion, including a great hall that dates from 1564.

Author laments decline of county's watermills

By JENNA PUDELEK

A LIFELONG fascination with watermills has inspired a book lamenting the loss of the structures that once dominated the banks of Kent rivers.

In Memories of Kentish Watermills, author Alan Stoyel takes a nostalgic look back at his childhood documenting the mills near his home in Orpington.

He told how his first memory of a watermill was when, aged eight, he sat with his father on a wall beside Longford Mill, near Dunton Green, sketching the building.

But it was Elm View Mill on the outskirts of Westerham on the banks of the River Darent that hold a special place in his heart.

"That was the subject of my first attempt at understanding a watermill," he said. "I was 13 at the time and I had cycled to this ruined mill about 12 miles from home."

"It still had its waterwheel and I learnt to admire how the clear water of such a small stream had been harnessed to drive heavy machinery. There was no ugliness, no pollution."

The book contains a lifetime of work, published 50 years on from when he would cycle to the ruined mills of west Kent and document them, speaking to local people who would reminisce about their past way of life and sketching the already crumbling structures.

BYGONE DAYS: Victoria Mill in Dartford was one of the 50 watermills once found in Kent

"My father was mad on steam engines," he said, explaining how his fascination developed.

"I loved old machinery and water, so the combination was too much to ignore."

Mr Stoyel left Kent in 1960, and went on to work as a mining geologist in Canada.

He dug out his early work documenting mills, and when he returned to Kent found the county of his childhood was much changed.

"When I knew Kent there were still lots of rural parts left," he said. "When I was young there were still people left who had worked in the mills."

"I hope the book will give people a sense of what they used to be and it will hopefully trigger off efforts to preserve more of the past."

He said at one time more than 50 watermills existed on the banks of the rivers Darent and Cray, but today none survive as complete structures and many have been completely demolished.

Mr Stoyel, who now lives in Herefordshire, said: "The Westerham mill was a romantic ruin when I was younger, it still had its waterwheel, but it did not have a roof."

"Suddenly it was demolished and I was extremely upset."

The brickwork of the Elm View Mill dated from the 18th century and was a particularly bright red, he remembers in the book.

As a young boy he was excited to meet a 99-year-old local man who remembered the iron waterwheel being installed and replacing the old wooden one.

"What he did was to bring this derelict shell of a mill back to life, helping me to visualize it in its working state, so long before," he said.

The book includes many historic pictures of watermills including the impressive Victoria Mill in Dartford. In a photograph dating from the 1890s it is shown when trade was at its peak and then contrasted with another image from 1961 showing its demise.

He added: "When these mills were first built there were no concerns about renewable energy or carbon footprints. A continuous stream of water was all that was needed to drive heavy machines all day long."

Memories of Kentish Watermills is priced £9.99 and available to order online.

Tory plans to open grace and favour homes to public

A PRIVATE mansion on the outskirts of Kent could have its doors forced open to the public should the Conservatives win the next general election.

The 115-room Chevening House – in Chevening, near Sevenoaks – is one of three grace and favour residences the Tories would like charities and voluntary groups to be able to use for fundraising events.

Situated near a lake in the midst of a 3,500-acre estate, the mansion is the official country retreat of the Foreign Secretary – currently David Miliband – and is traditionally used to entertain members of foreign governments. However, the Tories say this has happened on just five occasions between 2000 and 2006.

Prime Minister

Shadow cabinet office minister Francis Maude said: "Conservatives will explore how we can open these grace and favour residences to charities and voluntary groups, letting them hold receptions and events to benefit good causes."

The property is run by the charitable Chevening Trust, although the Government has a significant influence over who sits on the board.

However, secretary to the board of trustees Colonel Richard Brook told Kent on Sunday it would not be a simple process.

He said: "It's actually for the private use of whoever is nominated to use it by the Prime Minister, and we are all bound by the Chevening Act which lays down exactly how the house is used. The trustees do open the house at the moment to visitors under certain circumstances, and also the gardens for charitable use each year."

Warming up for winter

SEPTEMBER has been a hectic month which ended with me opening a new restaurant venture in Chester; my first outside Kent.

Restaurant launches are always an exciting time, often filled with the unexpected.

Preparing a menu for the opening is exciting and a chance to establish the identity of the restaurant with the public. My commitment to sourcing locally and providing the best seasonal produce available remains the foundation of my approach in Chester.

Being an executive chef at the Oddfellows gives me a chance to build a team that understands this ethos and approach from the kitchens to the front of house and that is vital to ensure everything runs smoothly when I am not able to be there.

It is the same at Chapel Down, Thackeray's and the Hengist. Obviously I cannot be at all places at once, so building a team who fully understands my commitment to quality, taste and value is as important as the food itself.

This time last year we had the excitement of our Chapel Down restaurant being one of the finalists for the Kent Restaurant of The Year in the Taste of Kent awards, run by Produced in Kent.

We have been working hard to improve on last year's results and it would be great to have all three Kent restaurants achieve final placing with the judges.

Again, the teamwork I mentioned earlier is very much exemplified in my Kent restaurants, as is our commitment to customers and providing the best dining experience and excellent seasonal produce.

It is always difficult to know exactly what the judges are looking for and you can only do your best.

Celebrity chef Richard Phillips, who runs three restaurants in the county and supports of our local food campaign, looks at a busy month, the changing seasons and its impact on his menu.

The good thing about these awards is that the public also get a chance to influence the judging by voting at the Produced in Kent website www.producedinkent.co.uk.

Recently I have been busy filming a new series of Ready, Steady Cook and had the bizarre experience of completing the Christmas special a few weeks back while the sun was shining and the temperature at its peak.

It was quite a stretch of the imagination to be working around a set decorated for Christmas while the sun was hitting 80 Fahrenheit outside, but we had lots of fun and it will be interesting watching it closer to Christmas.

With the arrival of October everything growing in the garden suddenly seems to be slowing down and changes in air temperature turn our thoughts to the coming winter.

The trees are changing hues to warm reds, rust coloured browns and leaves are falling, leaving branches bare. The harvest is in and we can prepare for an abundance of good seasonal winter root vegetables, such as parsnips, swedes, turnips, carrots plus a variety of squashes and other family favourites such as Brussels sprouts.

Many of these vegetables may seem unexciting, but a little thought and effort can turn a daily staid veg into a tasty treat for all the family.

As autumn arrives we often turn to recipes that not only warm us but also bring a sense of comfort, and today's recipe is the perfect autumnal dish.

It's my interpretation of a traditional casserole dish and is a fantastic-tasting British dish using the finest local ingredients.

COMMENT

Drivers are sold down the river

MOTORISTS who spend hundreds of pounds every year at the Dartford Crossing toll booths could be forgiven for feeling victimised by successive governments.

It was bad enough continuing to have to pay to use a bridge that was paid for six years ago, yet they now face the threat of even higher charges after Gordon Brown announced plans to sell it into private hands.

The idea is a kick in the teeth for the environmentalists, politicians and road-users who have campaigned to do away with the tolls.

Mr Brown says the sell-off will raise billions for the public purse and help ease the UK out of recession, but try telling that to the owners of small firms facing ruinous higher charges.

They and the many residents whose lives have been blighted by traffic and pollution don't seem to have been spared a thought.

The crossing should have been the answer to motorists' dreams when it was built, yet it has turned into a money-spinning nightmare.

Ruffled feathers

FROM January it will become legal in certain situations to shoot or poison the ring-necked parakeet – otherwise known as the most annoying alarm clock in the world.

Its squawk has awoken many a Kent resident over the years and, strangely enough, rock legend Jimi Hendrix may be to blame.

Fortunately for the parakeet, being irritating will not be a good enough reason in itself for them to be culled.

OPINION:

For whom the toll smells

Proposed Dartford Crossing sell-off is a bridge too far for our discredited rulers, says Ukip MEP Nigel Farage

IN AN age of public cynicism about MPs and their lifestyles and in the midst of the deepest recession many have seen, the proposed sale of the Dartford Crossing can only serve to heighten the disgust at our professional political classes.

I became involved in the campaign to abolish the tolls in 2001 when it became clear that whatever happened, the Government would not relinquish such a valuable cash cow, regardless of earlier promises. I've heard all the excuses, from the absurd to the downright laughable. Most memorable was transport minister Stephen Ladyman's idea that they "prevented the bridge from being overloaded".

Dr Ladyman had not taken the trouble to discover that traffic waiting at the southbound tolls queued back over the bridge, turning it into a huge car park for at least six hours a day. The Government continues to pretend the charges remain to "ease congestion".

There are several things we can be certain of when the Government sells off the Dartford Crossing. First, it will ensure the crossing will never be free to use, and be a permanent reminder of why professional politicians should never be trusted. Duck houses and second homes pale into insignificance alongside the more than £70 million the Government extorts at Dartford annually.

Second, now we have created a fund to pay for repairs to the crossing in perpetuity, the Government will make us pay again. Having frittered away taxes propping up banks, the fund will not be handed to the new owners but will instead be kept by central government. Meaning we'll have to pay for the same thing all over again, this time to a private company.

Third, even if the Government changes before the sale is complete, it will go ahead anyway.

Anyone who thinks the Conservatives will honour earlier promises to remove the tolls obviously hasn't looked at their refusal to hold a referendum on the Lisbon Treaty if it's already ratified before they take power.

In this, as in almost everything else, there's no difference between New Labour and Blue Labour. The Government's arguments for keeping the tolls are nonsense. Its proposal to sell the crossing is a betrayal, not just of earlier promises but of the people of Dartford, who have to suffer the consequences. Dartford generally, and the Temple Hill estate particularly, suffers some of the worst air pollution in the country, caused almost exclusively by traffic queuing on the approaches to the toll plaza.

Concentrations of carbon monoxide, nitrogen dioxide and particulate pollution all exceed maximum permitted levels, not just on a regular basis, but daily.

As the power outages in Kent showed a couple of months ago, when the tolls booths are closed and tolling suspended, traffic flows freely and pollution falls.

Naturally, the first area to receive emergency power generation during the five-day blackout was the toll plaza, which was operational within hours. The Government knows not to kill a goose that lays golden eggs.

Then there is the damage to the environment. In every other area, the Government uses taxes to reduce the supposed effects of climate change. Yet at Dartford we see a tax, in the form of tolls, which not only encourages the emission of tons of pollutants every day, but the collection of the tax actually causes it. Whether you subscribe to the global warming theory or not, we can all agree that this pointless creation of pollution for monetary gain is unacceptable.

I can't tell you how to stop this iniquitous toll, or how to stop the proposed sale. I have protested, written letters, signed petitions and raised the issue in the European Parliament for eight years, without success. I have watched the Conservatives raise the issue every time an election is due, before dropping it as soon as the results are counted.

But I can tell you this: if we continue to send the same parties to Westminster, we cannot be surprised if nothing changes. It is up to all of us to ensure that this abuse of taxpayers' trust stops.

And we should protest – both physically and through the ballot box – until it does.

IF THE days are fine and sunny, and the nights cold and still, we have a beautiful autumn season.

Cold nights assist in intensifying the colours of the dying foliage. In the eastern United States they are justly famous for beautiful autumn colours because of the climate there.

The brilliant colours of English autumns come from a variety of sources. Deciduous trees, berries and stems are our large-scale providers of colour.

Prunus sargentii is the earliest ornamental cherry tree to change into its autumn colours of red and orange. The foliage of the small tree Amelanchier lamarckii often starts to colour in late summer. It is one of my favourite trees. The margins of the leaves turn red and the veins yellow, and then slowly the whole leaf becomes dark red before it falls.

Liquidamber is a most stately tree. In the autumn the foliage takes on a magnificent array of colours from yellow, orange and red to the darkest purple. It is not a tree for a small garden, so look for it in one of your nearby parks or National Trust gardens.

The coloured stems of many Cornus and Salix are suitable for any garden. They look wonderful in great swathes in large gardens, but if your garden is small choose just one, and position it so that it catches the low rays of the winter sun. One of the best is Cornus 'Midwinter Fire', it is small and the stem colour is intense.

The reliable shrub, Cotoneaster horizontalis makes a brilliant display of scarlet at this time of year; it is hard to distinguish the leaves from the berries, they are both small and bright red. There are many types of Cotoneaster, from small shrub to medium-sized tree, deciduous and evergreen; and they can be a good choice for a shady part of the garden.

If you have an acid soil the autumn colours of many shrubs and trees will be intensified. The photo of Fothergilla major shows just how brilliant the autumn colours are. It is a lovely deciduous shrub that grows to 2 x 2 metres on a well-drained acid soil in a sunny position.

Berries are essential for birds and small mammals as food throughout the winter, as well as being very ornamental in our gardens. Birds will strip a tree of berries, just as they do my raspberries, knowing exactly the right moment to choose for perfect ripeness. Birds take berries in a particular order, red is first, then orange, yellow, white and lastly, pink.

Every tree drops its leaves at a particular moment, they don't all drop at once, which can be good or bad news depending on the quantity you have to rake up. It also means that the colours of autumn go on and on for many weeks, so keep your eyes open and enjoy this wonderful and ever-changing display. It is quieter than fireworks, but equally as colourful and beautiful.

AFTER our disappointing summer, it's understandable we're relishing early autumn's sunny days and hoping they'll linger for as long as possible.

We're enjoying what's known as an 'Indian summer' – a spell of warm, hazy weather that can occur in September, October or even November.

But wishful thinking won't ward off winter's icy winds and storms forever, so it's time to find a lasting way of conjuring a warm atmosphere – by treating rooms to a dose of hot-house style this autumn.

Turn to a decor scheme inspired by India, with the embellished furniture and jewel-rich colours of its interiors perfectly in tune with our growing desire to banish yesterday's cool, bland room schemes.

And it's timely that a major new exhibition is celebrating the nation's rich decorative style and culture.

Maharaja: The Splendour of India's Royal Courts is on show at London's Victoria & Albert Museum from October 10 to January 17, and features stunning collections including paintings, gem-encrusted jewellery, saris and even an opulent throne.

Luckily, you don't

Home on the Raj

Be inspired by our surprising Indian summer and conjure the heat of the East with our selection of 'hot' homeware need the wealth of those bygone rulers to create a contemporary interpretation of India's style as it's been embraced by high street stores and online companies, so there's an array of affordable treasures and gems which will help give homes an exotic glow.

You could simply feature one key ethnic-inspired piece, maybe a carved dark-wood side table, or add shimmering, bejewelled lamps, silky throws and a scattering of sparkling beaded cushions to transform a room into a decadent, sumptuous sanctuary.

Finish with a dash of spicy colour – reminiscent of a colourful deep and vibrant orange, terracotta, red or – most contemporary (but only for the brave) – hot pink!

Alternatively, walls painted in soft whites or pastels are an ideal, simple backdrop if you're displaying richly-coloured accessories.

"In India, bright colour is treated as an essential component to the decorative scheme," says Judith Miller, who features a host of inspirational colour schemes in her beautifully illustrated book, Country Colour (Jacqui Small, £30).

She explains that just as precious jewels were used to decorate the Taj Mahal, so colour is used to radiate in an interior.

Her advice: "It's especially effective when used with bright saturated florals, fabrics with strong contrasting pattern and silks."

Hot buy: Iconic Sixties fashion designer Barbara Hulanicki's collection of decadent flock-embossed papers for Graham & Brown could have been devised for this style.

Particularly suitable is a hot pink floral Ophelia paper in Hollywood Cerise or a metallic Grape version featuring black flock flowers on a gold background. Papers cost £60 a roll.

Summer's sultry days needn't be a distant memory if you choose from our feast of hot homeware.

several contrasting shades used together, are a seductive way to dress windows or equally as effective as ultra-feminine hangings for a four-poster bed.

Fabrics such as those used for saris like Georgette (a blend of nylon or polyester) or chiffon in nylon or silk can simply be draped over curtain poles or used in layered panels.

Source from specialist fabric shops or markets, or from online companies such as www.indian-accessories.com.

Hot buy: Block out a depressing view of dark clouds and showers by making a blind or curtains with a dramatic black and fuchsia pink bloom fabric. Lydia fabric is £11.99 a metre from Dunelm Mill.

Furnish and flatter

Decorative, embellished furniture with intricate carvings, or pieces with a beaten metal finish are eminently suitable for a little palace that you can call your own.

Carved wooden furniture sits well in any space, and while your own throne might be hard to find, there are some bargains to be had.

An attractive Haveli nest of three carved tables with a sheesham wood veneer is £199 from Tesco Direct, or, if you're on a smaller budget, Dunelm Mill's white painted Mango wood cabinet, with elaborate carved door, is a snip at £49.99, as is its Filigree carved mirror, £39.99.

If you're completely won over by this style, Graham & Green has a beautiful range, sourced in India, of metal-covered furniture reminiscent of the palaces of Rajasthan, and a selection of hand-crafted inlay furniture.

These are investment buys – a floral embossed white metal chest has a price ticket of £975 and a Bronze finish coffee table costs £350.

And there's plenty to plunder at newly-launched company Niki

Jones whose range is already drawing compliments. Striking bone-inlay chests start from £435 and a black and white bone inlay Jaipur mirror costs £84.95.

Hot buys: A white metal cabinet with crystal handle, £130 from The Orchard at www.notonthehighstreet.com or an embroidered velvet footstool, £50 from Laurence Llewelyn-Bowen's collection at Matalan.

Capture an eastern glow

Lighting should be subtle, otherwise the glamorous, seductive feel of this look will be lost.

Ornate chandeliers and lamps with beaded shades and flickering candlelight make an ideal combination for illumination.

Laura Ashley's glorious lighting selection includes a deep pink Bryony glass pendant with glass fringing, £100, or a Bluma ball pendant, £175, glittering with suspended crystals.

Lamps on side-tables cast a soft glow, and QVC has featured Eastern style with a beaded amber lampshade and Peacock embellished base, £44.25, and it also has three gold jewelled candles, £13.50.

Hot buy: A Champagne tiered pendant light, in silver and crystal, £175 from Bhs's Maison collection.

Bazaar accessories

One of the joys of this style is that one or two eye-catching accessories may be all that's needed to "transport" a room to warmer climes.

Build up the heat – and the look – gradually by sourcing items such as decorative glass handles to revamp a cupboard or door, embroidered cushions or jewel-coloured throws.

A vibrant Temple Jewels quilt and sham set, £54, and a set of six flocked glass jars, £23.25 from QVC, could be suitably exotic touches for a boudoir.

Pretty details, such as knobs that are as brightly coloured as sweets, can be found at John Lewis and its selection starts from £2.45.

Graham & Green's collection of variously coloured glass door handles are £18.95 each, while another good destination for Indian summer touches, Really Linda Barker, offers a set of three crystal knobs for £18.75 and it also has an unusual Indian-style table parasol, £29.95.

Capture the grace of the colorial Raj by serving drinks on silver trays, £10 each from Bhs, or by holding an elegant tea party.

These two accessories could make an occasion special: jewelled teaspoons, £28 for a set of six from The Travelling Souk, and an Elephant shaped tea-cosy, £45, embroidered by Kashmiri craftsmen, from The Victoria and Albert museum shop.

Hot buy: Marks & Spencer's aptly-named Indian Summer leaf-embroidered cushion, £35 in rich reds, blues, purple and golds on a brown background.

Maison chandelier, £175 from Bhs

Graham & Green glass door handles, £18.95 each; (Right) mango cabinet, £49.99 from Dunelm Mill

A moving experience

➤ By HANNAH STEPHENSON

LATE autumn is a good time to move large shrubs and other plants, while they are dormant, to more suitable places or even into pots until you can decide where you want them to go.

The ones which are most easily moved are those with fibrous roots – masses of thin roots which don't go very deeply in to the soil. You can dig right underneath the root system and it doesn't matter if a few roots are broken, as there will be plenty of others left to take hold and become established.

Shrubs that are easy to move include camellia, Mexican orange blossom (Choisya ternata), dogwood, broom, heather, forsythia, fuchsia, hebe, spiraea, rosemary, mock orange (Philadelphus), kerria and hydrangea.

Before you start, decide where you want the shrub to grow and dig the ground where you are going to plant, adding some bulky organic matter.

Dig a circular trench around the shrub with a radius of between 30 and 45cm (12-18in) depending on the size of the shrub and keep digging down until you reach the end of the roots. Then push the spade under the shrub and lever it gently to ease out the remaining roots. You may have to do the same on the other side and go round the shrub several times before it lifts out.

Once the shrub is completely loose, rock it forwards, away from you, and place a large piece of sacking or heavy duty polythene sheeting underneath it. Then rock the plant towards you and manoeuvre the sacking underneath it so that the shrub is in the centre of it. Tie the sacking tightly around the rootball and lift the whole thing out, before giving it a good water.

It's best to transfer the shrub straight away. Dig a hole slightly larger than the rootball and put the shrub in it, ensuring that it's at exactly the same level in the soil as it was before. If it's too low, put some more soil in the bottom of the hole. If it's too high, make the hole a bit deeper.

Once you have a perfect position, slide the sacking out from underneath the shrub and mix a handful of blood, fish and bonemeal in with some of the soil you've dug out, using it to fill in the hole and give the shrub a good soaking. Firm the plant in gently with your heel, to take up any air pockets.

Shrubs which are more difficult to move include buddleia, the smoke bush (Cotinus coggygria), berberis, weigela, lilac and flowering currant (Ribes).

Shrubs with tap roots, which grow very deep and have fewer roots, are more difficult to move as it's harder to dig them out and if you damage the roots there will be fewer to establish themselves in their new position.

If you are determined to move a prize shrub which has tap roots, dig a wide trench around it, filling it with organic matter and leave it for 12 months. That way it will produce new roots which grow out into the organic matter, so that it forms a new, stronger rootball which will compensate if you snap the tap root when you lift the shrub out.

Once you have replanted your shrub, keep it well watered until it has established itself and add a layer of organic mulch to protect it over the winter months.

DIG IT: Make sure you watch the root system when moving your prized shrubs

FINDING the right windows and doors for any period property can be a bit of a nightmare and also very expensive. Happily Ayrton Bespoke has the perfect solution and can reproduce any style you need at a price you can afford.

Ayrton Bespoke has gained a reputation for creating period designed, high quality timber windows and doors for the homeowner and trade markets. This reputation is based on three principles: professional design, outstanding craftsmanship and exceptional value. Using the latest construction methods, Ayrton's windows and doors are supplied fully finished including final paint finish, warm edge double glazed units, lockable ironmongery and all included in the price, making life a lot simpler. The company also provides a fitting service.

Be a basket case with these eco-friendly lovelies

WHETHER you are just popping down to the local market for organic vegetables, or gathering wool for knitting a cosy throw or storing your recyclable paper – the Kikapu baskets come in handy. They are a practical size for shopping and loads of other uses and completely reusable – no more need for plastic bags. In fact they are the ultimate eco-friendly reusable bags.

Squashable, light, comfortable to carry and easy to stack, and they also look good. The price is just £18 for three including postage.

Baskets are a very traditional East African product and are used for carrying virtually everything from clothing and food to small animals. 'Kikapu' is pronounced 'key-car-poo'. The raw materials are hand harvested in East Africa from naturally growing plants – completely sustainable.

The baskets are hand-made in rural Africa and bought directly for a fair price – trade not aid.

Available from www.thetravelling-souk.com who will also give 2.6 per cent of the price to a charity.

Interior designer Helle Hylleberg answers readers' design dilemmas

Q I live in a Victorian terrace and have very little space for storage. I especially need ideas of where to store gloves and scarves for the winter. Can you help?

Natalie, Canterbury

A Putting any kind of furniture in the hallway would probably be impossible. But – here is a creative idea that is both trendy and cheap! Buy two or three letterboxes – go wild on colour if you like! – hang them up in a row in the hall and hey presto – storage for hats and scarves. Have fun!

General advice for hallways:

- Think of this space as your window to the world – this might make you tidy up a bit!
- This is probably the room in the house which would be most prone to clutter – shoes, coats, umbrellas, post, etc. When you choose storage, make sure that your needs are met with the right kind of furniture.
- Add colour – if not paint, then art on the walls or a colourful doormat.

If you have any questions you'd like to ask Helle, email hylleberg@live.co.uk or post them, marked Homes & Gardens Q & A, to KOS Media, Apple Barn, Hythe Road, Smeeth, Ashford, Kent TN25 6SR.

TRIM: Elegant-looking spiral topiary, in Green Park, near Buckingham Palace, London

Create a sense of

While natural gardens and meadow plantings may have increased in popularity in the last few years, formal gardens still have a place in our fast-paced, chaotic world

➤ By HANNAH STEPHENSON

THE desire to shape and square, to manipulate plants and space to attain order and create symmetry, is a subject explored by designer pals Diarmuid Gavin and Sir Terence Conran in their new book Planting, in which they share many of their planting secrets with enthusiasts.

"Humans love order and repetition. There is symmetry to it," Gavin explains. "They like the illusion of reflection – whether it is mirrors or still ponds."

"And they have an abiding desire to control outdoor space: to clean it and to level and decorate it with familiar lines and shapes."

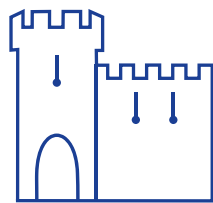

While many formal gardens were designed to be viewed from a distance, to create grandeur by using geometric shapes, this vista cannot be easily transferred to suburban gardens because of their less even shapes and sizes.

PATH TO FORM: Formal garden with neatly trimmed hedges and hydrangeas

Aspects of formal gardens in the UK have been copied by many amateur gardeners on much smaller scales, achieving formal style with ferns or grasses, or simply by using just one colour of flowers. "You can create your own sense of drama and theatre within the boundaries of the plot by laying out grids using ever-green shrubs," says Gavin.

Some plants are particularly easy to manipulate and clip into shape year on year, including box, yew (Taxus baccata), privet (Ligustrum lucidum), juniper, holly and berberis.

"You can make little formal hedges that may be no more than 20cm high, or you can clip hornbeam or species of lime (tilia) into very unnatural but pillar or column-like structures," Gavin explains.

In smaller spaces, such as courtyards, many gardeners place some sort of ornament in the centre of the space, such as an aquatic feature like a small fountain or bowl of still water, or an architectural plant.

Containers can also create a much more formal feel to a small garden.

"A parallel row of containers can be introduced to reinforce the geometry of a scheme, guiding the eye to a focal highlight or in the direction of a stunning vista," Gavin explains.

"Pots of beautifully-trimmed evergreen shrubs or those brimming with cascading flowers can illuminate paved courtyards, as well as being used to enhance formal entrances or walkways.

"Ornate pots and those of aged stone suit a formal garden, while traditional terracotta is classic in any garden setting. Keep the different styles as limited as possible – a single style has the greatest impact."

Plants synonymous with formal gardens, including box and privet, create structure, shape and form in pots, while topiary specimens can be made to look the same through clipping – pyramids, spheres and columns are favourites.

Tall, slim containers can be used to line and define a patio area planted with box ball topiary to provide evergreen colour, contemporary planting and architectural emphasis.

Square pots filled with plantings of the same colour (white is always a good option) and again used in repetition can bring structure to a softer, tree-filled garden.

"Large containers can become the main focal points in a formal setting. They are wonderful as structural features at the bottom of a garden and look superb if set on a raised terrace for a feeling of grandeur, defining the boundary and ownership of the land," says Gavin. "Architectural plants best serve this purpose."

CONCEPTS: Diarmuid Gavin and Sir Terence Conran who have written a new book

You can, however, add much colour to your formal garden through container plants.

"Pelargoniums, wallflowers and matched mixed planting can be used to inject a burst of colour. Big blowsy shrubs such as hydrangeas, roses and lilacs look wonderful in a formal garden," says Gavin.

"Grow them so they are approximately the same shape and size, and position single species in repetition to restore the sense of control that is easy on the eye and definitive of formal garden design."

MULCHING IN THE VEG PATCH

Applying a mulch to the veg patch, or areas of it, simply means using a material to cover the top layer of soil. This may be done for a number of reasons with both organic (natural) and inorganic (man-made) 'mulches'.

Organic mulches include farmyard manure (FYM), leaf mould, compost, grass mowings, or spent soil from pots and containers.

These are substances which to a greater or lesser degree (and FYM is tops in this department) bulk-up and feed the soil. They all encourage soil life, especially earthworms.

These humble creatures are an absolutely essential component of healthy soil, playing a crucial role incorporating and cycling matter, as well as helping drainage via their extensive and labyrinthine tunnels.

An organic mulch may be used to keep the soil warm in winter but cool in summer; prevent weeds from germinating by robbing them of the light, or conserve moisture if flopped down around a growing crop following a good soaking.

Newspaper and cardboard are considered as organic because they will rot down readily. They are especially useful when laid down underneath one of the mulches already mentioned, as a protective winter blanket.

'Living mulches' comprise growing a green manure to cover bare soil in gaps between cropping, or to protect the growing medium over winter from the erosive powers of wind and rain (not to be underestimated), especially on a slope.

Legumes (the pea and bean family) such as clovers, lucerne (alfalfa) and field beans do a great job. They also fix atmospheric nitrogen in root nodules which is usefully exploited by the next batch of veggies grown in the area. These, and others such as phacelia, also add a goodly supply of organic matter to soils when they are cut down and turned-in before sowing.

MULCHING: Now is the time to mulch your patch using either organic means, ie a 'green' manure (left); or controlling weeds by using non-organic means like an old carpet

Non-organic mulches include black plastic sheeting which is often left in place for a year or more to kill persistent weeds such as couch-grass or dock by totally preventing light penetration. Land can be still be worked with this sheeting in place by planting seedlings (or potato tubers) through carefully cut slits. Old carpet is another favourite among gardeners, as a light-excluding mulch used to suppress weeds and create bare soil without strenuous digging.

Soap just won't wash

Am I the only one incensed to read that cash-strapped Kent County Council has spent £1.6 million creating KentTV, including a 10-part soap called Hollywood?

Since when did it become a council's remit to produce TV programmes?

At a time when KCC is suffering from the Icelandic investments debacle, when its income is falling due to businesses closing and when Tory leader David Cameron wants to roll back the State, it's highly inappropriate that ratepayers' money is spent in this way. I hope others join me in writing to KCC leader Paul Carter (paul.carter@kent.gov.uk) to request that this misuse of our money is closed down immediately.

Mark Dickerson, Whitstable

Power cut payments

Many readers will recall the serious power cut in and around Dartford in July and will have received a letter from EDF at the time advising that, although this incident was outside the scope of the electricity regulations, EDF was nonetheless offering a goodwill payment of £50 to those without electricity for 24 hours or more.

Customers were invited to apply for this payment by the October 31. If anyone has not yet applied, I urge them to do so without delay. However, the judgement as to whether this incident fell within the regulations or not is for energy regulator Ofgem to make, not EDF.

Ofgem is investigating the matter and expects to publish a decision at the end of October, or early in November.

If Ofgem decides against EDF, then payments of £50 for the first 18 hours without electricity (£100 for businesses) plus £25 for each successive 12-hour period will be payable.

The catch is that to qualify for these possible payments customers have to apply to Plane-speaking Cameron?

So it looks as if Sheerness will be listening to the roar of aeroplanes after all, even though Tory leader David Cameron says no.

If this is the case and no truly means no, can someone explain why London Mayor and fellow Tory Boris Johnson has been chatting to sheikhs, China and other countries to fund it?

Yes, at the moment Mr Cameron may not be in favour, but he's not in power and doesn't want to upset the voters of Kent.

But make no mistake, if the Tories do win the next general election, his mind will be changed and Sheerness will only find out about it when the builders move in. By then it will be too late, with the deal already signed and sealed.

Voters must keep this in mind when they finally go to the polls.

After all, it's your peace and quiet that's going to be shattered – certainly not David Cameron's or Boris Johnson's.

Jennifer May, Gravesend

A strange democracy

Labour's parliamentary candidate for Folkestone and Hythe, Donald Worsley, has learnt the politician's hypocritical art very early in his career.

He berates Tory leader David Cameron for not being forthcoming on his policy towards the European Union, while his party promised a referendum three times – and reneged three times.

It's no surprise MPs dodge any referendum, as the EU accounts haven't been signed off for 13 years, being a commissioner guarantees millionaire status and all the EU offices and officials in them have been put above the law.

For our greedy expenses scandal MPs it must seem like manna from heaven – and no comeback.

There's something sick about a so-called democracy that refuses its electorate a vote on a major issue and something very corrupt and wrong about an organisation that either needs to bribe its members to vote as they require, or make them vote until they give the right answer. Hitler would have been proud of them. They've achieved what he couldn't, without a shot being fired.

Phil Granger, West Malling

Hospital parking victory

I was delighted with the Health Secretary's recent announcement that car parking charges at NHS hospitals are to be stopped.

My postbag, telephone calls and inbox showed that this was something that angered and inconvenienced patients in this constituency, and I shared their feelings on this.

For the last seven years I have been campaigning for this very result and I am pleased it has come at last.

We can't do it overnight. But, over the next three years, as we can afford it, the Government aims to phase out car parking charges for in-patients, giving each a permit for the length of their stay which family and friends can use.

Derek Wyatt MP, Sittingbourne and Sheppey

More green, less blue

David Cameron's speech at the Conservative conference was a disappointment for green groups.

Since becoming party leader, Mr Cameron has improved his party's electoral prospects by claiming a commitment to tackle climate change – going green by voting blue.

But during his speech in Manchester the environment barely featured in his vision for Britain. The Conservatives do not yet have the policies to rise to the challenge of climate change. This close to a general election, they should have.

Protecting our environment and building a green economy should be a priority. Insulating homes and developing clean, secure energy supplies will help create new green jobs and industries and should have been at the heart of Mr Cameron's vision for our recession-hit economy.

New low-carbon industries and investors urgently need confidence that a Conservative government would prioritise the development of a green economy, but this speech will not have given it to them.

Don't forget survivors

On behalf of the Disasters Emergency Committee (DEC), I would like to thank you readers for their generosity towards the people of Indonesia, the Philippines and Vietnam who were hit by a series of disasters within a single terrible week.

Since the launch of the appeal for urgent aid, the public have given more than £3 million, showing their steadfast support to the hundreds of thousands of people affected by the earthquakes, typhoons, floods and landslides. This kind of generosity is heartening, especially in light of financial uncertainties facing so many in the UK.

In the affected countries we have seen remarkable acts of bravery as people attempt to save themselves, their family and friends.

Survivors are now receiving support from DEC member agencies which, using the money raised, are helping meet the most urgent needs of hundreds of thousands of people for food, shelter and medical care. As governments clear the roads making access easier for us we will continue to respond to the basic, emergency needs of those we reach. But the battle for survival continues over the coming months as those affected face the task of rebuilding their lives.

We must be on hand to support this process of replanting crops, replacing farm animals and repairing homes, schools and medical centres.

The world's attentions will inevitably turn elsewhere, but we remain dependant on the generosity of the public to ensure that people who have survived terrible disasters do not face further, entirely avoidable, suffering. Embracing to internet

On November 13, Age Concern and Help the Aged's search for an Internet Champion, supported by BT, draws to a close.

We have experienced an overwhelming response from people whose lives have been transformed by technology. However there's still time for anyone 55 and over who has actively embraced the internet to consider applying.

More than 10 million people have never used the internet, of which 6.4 million are over the age of 65. Worryingly, older people also represent 39 per cent of the four million adults in the UK who are both socially and digitally excluded.

Often it's the people facing the toughest times who have the most to gain from what the internet has to offer. From the ability to keep in contact with friends and family, to the cost savings that can be made by shopping online, everyone has the right to the social and economic opportunities the web has to offer.

The internet is rapidly becoming a tool for everyday life and we hope by telling their story, the successful Internet Champion will act as an ambassador for older people and inspire them to experience the benefits of the internet for themselves.

For more information on the search, or for information about how you can get online, please call 0208 765 7200 or visit www.ageconcern.org.uk/it.

Martha Lane-Fox, champion for digital inclusion

Keep pace with WCRF

Have any readers been lucky enough to secure a place in the 2010 Virgin London Marathon through the public ballot?

World Cancer Research Fund (WCRF) is appealing to those who have secured their own place to consider fund-raising for us.

It's easy to join Team WCRF and in return we offer full support with training and nutritional advice, an essential runner's kit containing your unique WCRF vest and pedometer, a fund-raising pack and your own personalised online sponsorship page.

WCRF also offers a pasta party the day before the race and a post-race reception with a free massage and shower to soothe away aches and pains. Scientists estimate that about a third of the most common cancers could be prevented by following a healthy diet, being physically active and maintaining a healthy weight.

So not only will taking part in the Virgin London Marathon help you get into the kind of habits that can reduce your own cancer risk, but the money raised will help us continue to fund our research and education programmes on cancer prevention.

If you are interested in running for us, visit www.wcrf-uk.org/events or call 0207 343 4200.

Natalie Tarrant, events manager, WCRF

Beat the winter chill

Making sure older people receive the information and advice they need to stay warm and well in the winter months is a vital part of the work of Age Concern and Help the Aged.

With many older people forced to cut back on food shopping, or live in just one heated room of their house to save on fuel bills, it is vital older people take steps now to ensure they don't get caught out by the cold this winter.

That's why we've teamed up with British Gas to produce an information pack, called Staying Warm in Winter, available free to older people from this month onwards. The pack will offer essential advice on staying warm, keeping up with heating bills and tips on insulation, as well as a thermometer to help monitor how warm your home is.

Simple measures such as switching to low-energy lightbulbs and ensuring your water tank is properly insulated can have a big impact on energy and fuel bills.

It's also crucial that older people find out if they can apply for benefits this winter. Council tax benefit, pensions credit and the winter fuel payment are just a few of the entitlements available.

I urge anyone who is concerned about weathering the winter to call 0800 1692 081 and order one of our free packs to find out what support is on offer.

Mervyn Kohler, special adviser, Age Concern and Help the Aged

Big-hearted donations

I am writing to thank you and your readers for all of the support British Heart Foundation (BHF) Shops received as part of The BIG Donation – the UK's biggest ever stock appeal.

In September, BHF Shops launched the appeal in a bid to raise 350,000 bags of good quality stock, the equivalent of £7 million in donations in 30 days.

To our delight, we have been overwhelmed with support. Thousands of people, including celebrities such as Alan Carr and Jonathan Ross, joined together to help replenish stock in BHF Shops.

The appeal proved such a success that more than 360,000 bags of unwanted items have been donated nationwide – with some supporters having donated clothes made by the fashion world's most exclusive names. These items are being sold on the BHF eBay auction site at bhf.org.uk/eBay from 8pm on 8 to 18 October.

BHF Shops need your continued support. Over the last year, we have seen a 20 per cent drop in donations, despite being busier than ever.

Stock really is the lifeblood of our shops. Without it, we cannot survive and continue to generate millions of pounds towards the fight against heart disease, the UK's single biggest killer.

It's not too late for readers to bag a designer bargain at our auction and we urge everyone to continue to donate the books they're not going to read, or the clothes they'll no longer wear to a BHF Shop, or book a free online collection for furniture and electrical items at bhf.org.uk/shops.

Diane Locke, acting chief executive, BHF Shops

We're lagging behind

Pensioners are under serious threat of even higher energy prices according to regulator, Ofgem.

Typical bills could rise from over £1,000 per household to over £2,000 to meet needs for investment.

Pensioners and all others on low, fixed incomes are very vulnerable to increased energy prices. Years of under-investment mean the UK is behind virtually all other countries in Europe in relation to its production of electricity from renewable sources.

And our fuel poverty record is almost uniquely bad among industrialised countries.

About 30,000 people die of the cold each year in the UK – 800-900 of them in Kent and Medway. And yet the Government does not have a programme to ensure all housing is made energy efficient. The nuclear industry has admitted it cannot build new power stations without Government money, and the dream of a revived coal industry effectively died with the postponement of Kingsnorth due to uncertainties about factors such as future carbon costs and emissions trading rules.

So now the Government has no choice but to fully embrace a future based on energy efficiency and renewables.

The good news is that renewable energy obtained more investment globally in 2008 than fossil fuels, for the first time ever.

Efforts to bring both homes and empty commercial properties back into use in Kent and Medway can mean more housing and better energy efficiency.

But our local councils need the resources to ensure all homes are properly insulated, as a top priority.

Steve Dawe, Kent Green Party, Tonbridge

Trust's running total

I would like to appeal to any readers who have secured their own place in the recent ballot for the 2010 Virgin London Marathon, to consider running for the Children's Trust.

This national charity provides specialist care for some of the UK's most severely disabled children. Joining the trust's team will be a great way to enjoy the world-famous event, with enthusiastic supporters cheering you along the route.

where experts share their knowledge for preparation and nutrition.

It is a great opportunity for runners to help make a difference to the lives of disabled children, including children with acquired brain injuries, who receive care, education and therapy at the trust. Money raised from runners' sponsorship in the Virgin London Marathon will help the charity to help more children.

Please make a difference. I urge you to sign up now and help the Children's Trust make 2010 a memorable year. By joining the team, you will be helping us to reach out to even more children across the country. Visit

Being part of the team is great fun and a huge inspiration, as I experienced myself when I ran the Marathon this year. The Children's Trust provides help and guidance throughout the months leading up to the Marathon, with training days and workshops

Actively assisting their employees

By STEVE KNIGHT

steve.knight@kosmedia.co.uk

TWO Kent-based organisations were recognised for their commitment to training by winning the regional heats of the National Training Awards.

Organised by UK Skills on behalf of the Department for Business, Skills and Innovation, the awards celebrate those who have achieved "really outstanding business and personal success" through investment in training.

Kent Fire and Rescue Service and the Sevenoaks-based care agency Active Assistance picked up two of the three prizes on offer, beating 17 other organisations in the process.

Thanet council and The Avenues Trust special needs service in Sidcup also made the regional finals.

Kent Fire and Rescue Service was honoured for its work over the last four years in becoming a centre of excellence for incident command training. A course introduced in April, 2006, has led to a dramatic decrease in injuries suffered by on-duty firefighters in the county.

Head of learning Paul Flaherty said: "The development of our incident command training programme has put us well ahead of any other UK fire service in terms of course design, accreditation, assessment and validity. We are seen as the regional centre of excellence for incident command, and increasingly as the national lead."

Active Assistance is training its workers to support people with spinal cord injuries and help them to live independently.

HR manager Jane Jordan said: "Traditionally the relationship between an agency employer and its workers has been one where no additional benefits have been applied."

"By introducing a career, pay and reward structure, we have shown it is possible to dispel these assumptions and create an environment where the agency workers feel valued, rewarded and motivated."

The regional winners of the National Training Awards were announced at a ceremony in Cophthorne, West Sussex.

Meridian Tonight presenter Fred Dineage dished out the prizes.

Developing your staff

BUSINESSES across Kent have been invited to attend a seminar about training and qualifications.

The event in Wiltshire on Tuesday, October 27, has been arranged by Lantra – the sector skills council for environmental and land-based industries.

Development manager for qualifications Liz Pridgeon said: "The event will improve businesses' understanding of training and qualifications development, and show how they can contribute to the future success of industry through creating a supply of people with the right skills to become a part of tomorrow's workforce."

Call Avril James on 02476 858430 for more information and to book a place on the seminar.

Use centre resources to find a job

UNEMPLOYED people in Shepway are being offered help and training to get back to work, at the Romney Resource Centre in New Romney.

The centre in Mountfield Road allows job-seekers to search for employment online as well as receive careers advice and retraining.

Managing director Edna Delaney said: "This is a fantastic opportunity for people to have an individualised free package of support to enable them to access work and education in a supportive environment in New Romney."

The proposal is to close St John's Church of England Voluntary Controlled Infant School in August 2010 and relocate pupils to neighbouring schools. This proposal is made in order to reduce surplus places and to ensure that the remaining provision in the area will be able to deliver efficient and effective education.

The local authority believes the proposal is likely to lead to improvements in the standard, quality and/or range of the educational provision for the children with special educational needs (SEN) currently at St John's Church of England Voluntary Controlled Infant School because neighbouring schools will thereafter have larger overall budgets for SEN, and these increased budgets will enable those schools to increase the standard, quality and range of their SEN provision, and improve such provision in the local area from its present levels.

Because of the close proximity of alternative places, we expect that the majority of pupils would be able to walk to school. Pupil's who meet the criteria would be entitled to free home to school transport.

This notice is an extract from the complete proposal. Copies of the complete proposal can be obtained from: Chris McKenzie, Head of School Organisation and Student Services, Children and Adults, Medway Council, Gun Wharf, Dock Road, Chatham ME4 4TR. Exciting all-new S60 maps Volvo's future

By STEVE LOADER

VOLVO has unveiled the car to catapult it back into the big time – the all-new S60 due next year.

The Ford-owned Swedish marque stresses that pictures released are of a show concept, but be sure that it will get only minor tweaks now before official launch.

What is for certain is the racy four-door coupe styling – an evolution of the current car's lines – should put the heat on German rivals like the BMW 3-Series, Audi A4 and Mercedes-Benz C-Class.

Revamped

These cars should also be under more pressure on the handling front too; a recent first drive of Volvo's revamped S80 showed that Volvo is now closer to the pace on chassis development – a failing of the current S60.

It is also a safe bet that much of the new S60's hidden architecture is shared with the Ford Mondeo, which is no slouch in the handling department.

Concealed rear door handles add to the classy coupe look, increasingly fashionable in the executive sector and currently championed most obviously by Jaguar's highly-acclaimed XF and the VW Passat CC.

With the sale of Jaguar and Land Rover, Volvo is now the only brand left in the Ford empire's Premier Automotive Group. It was previously the most profitable badge in the PAG, but not enough to quash rumours that its cash-strapped parent was considering its sale.

Whether that question is posed again may hinge on the S60, which offers good potential for profitability and volume.

Currently, much rests on the revamped 2009 version of the S80 (pictured – inset) which we will road test soon.

A new version of Volvo's long-lived D5 2.4-litre twin turbodiesel delivers 205bhp and is quieter, more frugal and cleaner than before, though an uprated 175bhp version of the old engine continues along with a newly-arrived 109bhp 1.6D diesel entry model (£21,745) for Volvo's ultra-eco DRIVE branding, as well as 2.0 Flexifuel, 2.5T and V8 all-wheel drive petrol models.

This new-look powertrain line-up is also, at last, partnered by a chassis that puts the Volvo flagship on a firmer footing against German opposition.

The sportier set-up is standard on SE and SE Lux models, with a 'Comfort' chassis as a no-cost option or standard fit with Executive trim – we haven't driven the latter version, but if it's anything like the pre-facelift drive then avoid it.

The new standard sporty set-up is impressive though, with notably better damping when cornering.

The facelift has also given the S80 a much cleaner look with revised grille plus bigger Volvo badge, more chrome and a refreshed interior.

RAV's extra drive helps it maintain premium status

THREE generations on from the 1994 original, Toyota has launched a newly-revised third generation RAV4 using impressive Toyota Optimal Drive engines.

The world's No1 carmaker has applied powertrain technology already seen to deliver more power and sheer 'grunt' yet also offer lower emissions and consumption – a 'win, win' that hard-pressed consumers find hard to resist.

Toyota also decided to return to the market with a front-wheel drive only economy version, having ditched the innovation after slow sales on this option with the second generation RAV.

Underlining the premium positioning of the RAV these days though, is Toyota's decision to offer just two highly-spec'd trim levels – XT-R and SR – with alloys, leather, Bluetooth, dual-zone climate control, auto headlights and wipers, heated front seats and keyless 'Smart Entry and Start' as standard.

Prices start at £18,995 for the new front-wheel drive car, but you'll need a weighty £3,400 extra if you still must have 4x4.

...and Toyota hints at return of the coupe

TOYOTA has been preoccupied with hybrids and greener technology of late, but coupe fans may soon celebrate a long overdue replacement for the Celica... and more.

For the FT-86 looks like a genuine attempt to create a halo model for the Toyota badge: it is a five-seater using the classic sports car rear-wheel drive configuration for balanced handling, then complemented by a 2.0-litre 'boxer' engine.

The powerplant's horizontally-opposed cylinders allow the engine to sit lower for better weight distribution on cornering – a long-time Subaru speciality.

It is only a concept, but Toyota badly needs a bit of glamour again to balance the virtuous Prius and new IQ city car.

Ruff 'n' tuff vans

SOMETIMES vans have to get through sticky situations and bad weather to deliver the goods.

But operators don't always want the expense of running a 4x4 version, hence the decision by Citroën and Fiat to offer extra rugged conventional van derivatives.

Both the Citroën Berlingo XTR+ and Fiat Fiorino Traction + use a limited slip differential on their front driving wheels in order to get to places everyday models couldn't normally reach.

When grip on one wheel is lost, much of its power is automatically transferred to the other. Operators expected to make use of these rough, tough models would be in the utility, forestry, construction and agricultural sectors.

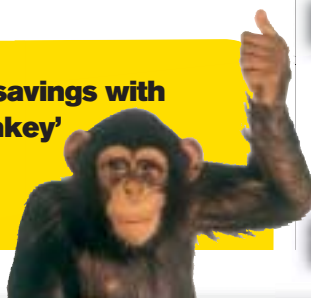

Berlingo XTR+ prices start at £14,160 and the smaller Fiorino Traction + from £9,655, both excluding VAT.

PEUGEOT is poised to launch its most potent model for some time in terms of new conquest sales and versatility.

The Peugeot 3008 goes head to head with Nissan's highly successful niche-busting Qashqai crossover and will revitalise the French marque's sales.

Demand in Europe is already ahead of projections, explaining why UK showrooms won't see the newcomer until early November – some weeks later than expected.

The wait will be worth it though.

Priced from £15,995 to £21,895, the 3008 is sized and priced between Peugeot's 308 family hatchback and its flagship 308SW estate cum MPV spin-off.

Dealers say it's just what they needed to satisfy some existing customers and attract new ones; there have been rumblings apparently about business lost to sister brand Citroën and its big-selling Picasso MPVs.

Tradition

Personally, I have always admired Peugeot's adherence to SW or 'super estate' versions of cars like the 307 and 308, which included seven-seat options and upheld a tradition of roomy cars for the rural French market.

It was also a point of difference with Citroën, not to mention Renault, but if you can't beat 'em, then join 'em' is the new attitude, so we now have the 3008 – both MPV and SUV in function and appearance – joined in January by the sleek new 5008 seven-seater (from £16,895) to the Vauxhall Zafira, Citroën C4 Grand Picasso and the Renault Grand Scenic.

Back to the 3008 and closer inspection shows that it breaks the mould for Peugeot in so many other ways too.

Peugeot's new niche buster arrives at last

CROSSOVER APPEAL: Peugeot is set to tackle rival Nissan Qashqai with this impressive and versatile 3008, priced from a reasonable £15,995

Classy exterior looks are matched by an interior that takes Peugeot's drive upmarket even higher than we have seen lately on 308 series models; materials quality is top notch and the harmony of design creates a cockpit feel about the front seats and dashboard and optional fighter-plane style head-up display for the speedo and distance alert.

Load-carrying versatility is excellent, with easily folded seats in the roomy rear compartment and a boot with three-position shelf.

The car also drives well; the Qashqai's success has been built on excellent driving characteristics for a high-riding car as well as its ability to be a 'Swiss Army Knife' with multiple functions.

You would need a head-to-head test to find out which is best, but the Peugeot certainly tackles its key rival across the board except with a 4x4 option.

But Peugeot has not ignored this weakness in the eyes of, admittedly, a few would-be buyers.

It will offer 4x4 capability and more later by launching the marque's first hybrid and probably the market's first to feature a diesel engine paired with electric motors – the latter will drive the rear wheels for better grip and traction on rough fields and when towing and also save weight over a conventional 4x4.

In the meantime, buyers can specify Grip Control (£450) on all 3008s; it's an advanced traction control system allied to special mud and snow tyres that mimics a modest 4x4 or 'soft roader'.

The driver is offered five settings, including snow, off-road (mud, dirt or wet grass) and sand. To prove its effectiveness, Peugeot used a 3008 with a 150bhp 1.6-litre petrol engine to launch a glider (see video on Motors TV at www.carsforkent.co.uk).

RenaultScenic

RENAULT would love us to believe that buying its Scenic compact MPV implies every journey will be a sensory pleasure – the 'scenic route'.

And there is much about the new third generation car to uphold that, but some scenery jars on the senses.

The cabin on the five-seat version tested is spacious and enhanced by a big glazed area.

However, the dashboard is one of the ugliest

you will see and cabin materials are generally off the pace.

A long hood over an uninspiring and penny-pinching centre-mounted digital display also fails to prevent some reflection on the screen of a much-vaunted factory-fitted sat nav that adds £350 to the price.

This system, developed with aftermarket sat nav leader Tom Tom to provide an admittedly more affordable alternative to often expensive yet inferior units fitted by carmakers, is a brave effort.

However, the excellent Tom-Tom touch-screen – the brand's big selling point – is replaced by a clunky and unnecessary interface on the centre console. Just buy a portable Tom Tom and save a few hundred quid.

The sound system – apart from the excellent French-style steering column mounted controls – is also typically and needlessly complicated; surely, in this day and age, you should not have to refer to the manual just to perform the simplest tasks?

Fortunately though, as with the occasional eyesore on a long journey, such niggles should disappear with long-term ownership and familiarity, leaving a better overall view of the latest Scenic launched in the summer.

For the car is sharply styled for an MPV – though the competition is also improving all the time – and has a wide tailgate for easy loading.

Flexibility is top notch; the three rear seats fold and slide easily, although I did receive some earache about the comfort levels when I took the family out... though I probably was driving too enthusiastically.

To be fair to the Scenic, I think its big virtue would be long distance cruising with a full load.

Few family users would complain about the location of three 12v sockets arranged to the front, middle and rear – the one in midships is actually mounted on the centre rear seat and perfect for plugging in games consoles, DVD players and so on.

A large sliding centre console and four under-floor lockers add to the huge amount of stowage; unlike some rivals, this is an MPV that can carry people plus a lot of their luggage.

The refined 160bhp 2.0 diesel is also a delight, though using its ample power for sporty driving reveals a suspension better suited to the comfort requirements of a fully laden MPV rather than supermini antics.

Mainstream Scenic prices start from £13,595 and seven-seat Grand Scenic versions are available for a £1,500 premium.

This makes the car pretty competitive, but it has its work cut out in seeking to claw back the leadership it once had in the mid-MPV sector.

It was one created by the original Scenic, itself a scaled down follow-up from Renault's pioneering Espace 'people carrier'.

Unfortunately, the brand's trendy French arch-rival Citroën then picked up the mid-MPV ball and ran with it after creating the Xsara Picasso, which went on to outsell the Scenic.

The Renault has a lot of ground to make up.

DON'T LIKE:

the clunky looking and poorly-finished dashboard – the 'créateur d'automobiles' should do better

NOT SURE:

many buyers will see any advantage in specifying the 'affordable' factory-fitted sat nav

REALLY LIKE:

the Scenic's overall functionality and levels of comfort – exactly what's needed from an MPV

'Property market has weathered the storm'

By ANDY ROGERS

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

KENT'S property market not only dispelled clouds of recession in 2008-09, but showed some warm fronts.

That is according to the 2009 Kent Property Market Report, launched to nearly 200 property professionals at Ashford International Hotel this week. High points in a challenging economic climate were stable office rental values – up 0.4 per cent against a UK average of -3.8 per cent – a 0.9 per cent increase in retail rental values, and strong demand for rural properties.

The report generated by Kent County Council and property expert Cluttons LLP for the investment promotion agency Locate in Kent, reviewed property performance and deals in Kent for the financial year April, 2008-March, 2009.

For the first time in its history, the report looked at rural properties as well as the county's residential, retail, tourism and regeneration programmes.

Findings highlighted how Kent's lack of dependence on any single sector could be a strength, while also pointing to demand for space from companies in manufacturing, transport and logistics, construction and property.

KCC leader Cllr Paul Carter said: "This report shows that Kent is resilient and coming out of this recession fighting. Kent has fared well in comparison with the rest of the UK."

"KCC sees regeneration as a major responsibility. We will continue to invest in roads, schools and schemes such as those in Thameside. And as a county we must take full advantage of the opportunities presented by the arrival of high-speed rail services."

While demand for larger business premises has declined due to a trend towards downsizing in the recession, the report picks out several key commercial deals and developments:

- Balfour Beatty Mott MacDonald moving into Kings Hill, near Maidstone.
- Girne American University buying 9 St George's Place, Canterbury.
- Smiths Medical International leasing space at Eureka Park, Ashford.

MODERN TIMES: The growth town of Ashford will benefit from faster trains high-speed rail services to London from December. The report also showed that Locate in Kent had played its part in maintaining the county's economic momentum; the body exceeded its 2008-09 investment targets, assisting 76 companies to relocate or expand in Kent and Medway and using nearly three times as much square footage as in 2007-08.

Locate in Kent chief executive Paul Wookey said: "During the year, Locate in Kent recorded 246 new projects, representing an increase on last year, further proving that interest in Kent from UK and international investors remains strong."

"We will continue to target high-growth and high-value sectors, including financial and business services, software infrastructure technologies, life sciences and environmental technologies."

"We want to tap into the Government's growth ambitions and Kent has a key role to play in helping the UK reach its full potential as a world-class leader in environmental technologies. The Thanet offshore wind farm, London Array and Little Cheyne Court wind farm are testament to Kent's ambition."

Concrete action by test-bed Kent firms cuts landfill

Making constructive use of waste matter

By ANDY ROGERS

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

THEY say "where there's muck, there's brass" and it's never been more true than now as the UK gets to grips with recycling, reusing and remaking.

And Kent has been the test bed for three innovative new products from the partnership between Remade South East and Ashford's Future.

Ashford is one of the nation's fastest growing towns and set to double in size by 2031 with 31,000 new homes created and a £2.5 billion investment programme.

Remade South East has highlighted case studies, drawn up sustainable construction product 'playing cards' and compiled a construction waste recycling directory, all to help developers design waste out of projects where possible and recycle the unavoidable.

Andrew Kent, project manager at Remade South East said: "We wanted to show how small, easy-to-adopt practices can be implemented by construction companies, resulting in significant and immediate environmental and financial savings, benefiting the construction companies themselves and the Ashford community."

Case studies draw on the experiences of three participating construction companies – Directline Structures, GSE Group and Hillreed Homes – all of which contributed towards diverting 1,600 tonnes away from landfill during one year and generating landfill tax savings of over £50,000.

Another study outlines how Remade South

East produced a site waste management plan for Directline Structures, which was building an office block at Orbital Business Park.

Jonathan Morton, design manager at Directline Structures said: "Directline Structures design sustainability into all our projects at an early stage, but working with Remade South East helped us minimise our waste, including recycling six tonnes of plasterboard and reusing 60 tonnes of stone and soil onsite."

The sustainable product playing cards spotlight quality construction products that are also sourced sustainably and energy efficiently and can replace conventional building materials; they include sheep-wool insulation, wet and hydraulic limes and rainwater harvesting systems.

Laurienne Tibbles, sustainability manager for Ashford's Future, said: "We hope these case studies and product cards will encourage construction companies to take positive steps to reducing the amount of construction waste sent to landfill. By addressing their construction waste, companies will be contributing to the sustainable development of Ashford."

■ ASHFORD-based market research firm Facts International is bucking the recession, with a recruitment drive following new business wins.

Its call centre at Henwood has increased capacity from 80 to 121 call stations and chief executive, Crispin Beale said: "In a time of recession and high unemployment, it's great to buck the trend and take on new staff. But we've been surprised that even in this economic climate it is still a challenge to find the right people to join our team."

Facts International undertakes face-to-face, online and call-centre research for its clients, who range from major UK and global companies, to leading research agencies.

The firm has been based in Ashford for 25 years, but expanded fast since joining global marketing services group Chime Communications in 2007.

■ THREE Kent companies have scooped awards for excellence in the oil heating and cooking sector.

Technicians Paul Hadlow of Maidstone's Roger Ward Ltd and Ian Ballard of Tenterden's IB Heating & Plumbing, and Swanley's Piper Assessment – a local training and assessment centre – all received awards at the Oil-Firing Technical Association (Oftec) Awards for Excellence.

Paul received a silver in the Oil Boiler Installer of the Year category, Ian received bronze in Trainee of the Year and company representative Steve Wright from Piper accepted a bronze in Training Centre of the Year category and silver in Green Initiative of the Year.

Now in their seventh year, the awards recognise high standards and dedication to consumers.

■ DESPITE this week's optimism about an end to the recession, HSBC Insurance has said the country is not out of the woods yet.

"Both the Nationwide and Halifax measures of house prices have been creeping up over the summer and while an end of recession in the UK is to be welcomed, it is only the first step in the recovery process," said HSBC economist Dennis Turner.

"For all the growing optimism there's nervousness that there is still bad news to come. Access to credit, possible public spending cuts and inflation all has the capacity to turn initial recovery into a false dawn. We are not out of the woods yet."

HSBC identifies five crucial steps for financial cushioning:

- Review finances and seek professional advice.
- Reduce debt levels.
- Don't slash insurances as a knee-jerk reaction.
- Continue with a pension.
- Insure against loss of income, health, job etc.

■ COLD-shouldered by the High Street banks, a fledgling Kent business has received new funding from Venture Finance.

After being turned down for a conventional overdraft, specialist design and print house, Stone Media Print of Lympne, tried Venture's Fast Track Factoring service launched this summer and aiming to fund applications within a week.

Stone Media MD Nick Henry called the funding option "a breath of fresh air" adding: "Getting access to funding as quickly as this is crucial for the success of our young business. We should have come to Venture in the first place."

Fast Track Factoring is available to businesses with a turnover of up to £2m and Venture Finance is part of the Dutch Government-owned ABN AMRO group.

Radar spend on horizon under airport's upgrade

KENT International Airport is investing more than £2 million in secondary surveillance radar (SSR) equipment.

The two-year project is part of a four-year upgrade programme by the New Zealand-based owner of the Thanet airport, Infratil, and follows improved direction finding equipment, airport information management systems (AIMS), meteorological sensors and radar screens.

The SSR investment is on top of £10m spent so far and the equipment will replace an externally provided service and supplement information from the airport's existing primary radar.

The system relays location, speed, travel direction and height of aircraft and the SSR is also part of activities designed to ensure the airport's radar coverage is not affected by offshore wind farms.

Bond bug is back with a bang – and glossy new look

CUE the John Barry brass and a silhouette of the man with the Walther PPK pistol and sharply-cut suit – Bond is back, in the form of 007 Magazine, writes Andy Rogers.

This long-running publication is on sale again by popular demand from its readership, said its Kent-based editor and publisher, Graham Rye. "The magazine started as a typed news sheet in the 1970s and grew into a lavish and glossy international publication selling to subscribers in 40 countries by the late 1990s," said Graham.

"But production costs had soared by 2005 and I adopted the perceived wisdom of the time, turning it into an online subscription operation, allowing people to read and download material as required.

"But I reckoned without the desire of real Bond enthusiasts to have something collectable – you only have to look at what back issues sometimes command on eBay to appreciate that.

"So 007 Magazine is back, although people can still subscribe and read online via www.007magazine.co.uk and enjoy other features there."

The latest magazine issue, number 51, costs £9.99 and only 1,000 copies have been produced.

Features include expert assessment of current Bond incumbent Daniel Craig and unseen illustrations from what became Never Say Never Again – the remake of Thunderball that returned Sean Connery as 007, though Graham remarks: "Sadly I always think of that film as Don't Bother Again."

Conversation with Graham quickly shows his encyclopaedic knowledge of the Bond genre, from Ian Fleming's original books to the successful film series produced by Cubby Broccoli and Harry Saltzman's EON Productions. He also has a collection of images that rival EON's own.

"I caught the Bond bug in 1962 when my dad took me to see Dr No [EON's first Bond film] in Southall [west London] where I was born and grew up," said Graham, 58, who now lives in Lydd – his father grew up in Kent.

"Dr No was completely different. All TV and most British films were black and white in those days, yet here was a slick movie about a British secret agent in glorious colour. It was like being hit in the face with a brick for an impressionable 11-year-old."

He also devoured Fleming's stories about the spy with a 'licence to kill': "I think Fleming suffered from his books being underrated by the literary world then and now, possibly because of the success of the films, but I would urge anyone to go back and read them again and enjoy the way he builds excitement so economically – perfect for a film script, really."

Graham left school at 16 to pursue a career in graphic art and design, starting as an ad studio messenger boy in the West End before getting his chance at the drawing board, but his interest in Bond never wavered. His memorabilia and photographic hobby grew into a £200,000-a-year 007 business phenomenon by the late

MASTERMIND: Graham Rye, above, on 007's movie career:

- Best Bond: 'Sean Connery. But Daniel Craig has brought back the edge that the early films had and the new films needed.'
- Best Bond girl: 'The first – Ursula Andress. Who can forget when she strolls from the surf in Dr. No? Honor Blackman [Goldfinger] was great, too.'
- Best Bond film: 'A toss-up between From Russia With Love and On Her Majesty's Secret Service.'
- Best Bond villain: 'Goldfinger – no question.'

LUCKY NUMBER: Graham Rye at the roulette wheel with his favourite Bond girl, Ursula Andress

'90s. "I dealt in Bond memorabilia – everything under the sun – and had a staff of three working with me at my base in Woking when the business was at its peak and the biggest of its kind in the world, but eBay destroyed it almost overnight," said Graham, who reports that the record price for a single Bond prop in auction (at Christie's) was £62,000 for the bowler hat worn by Goldfinger's henchman Oddjob, once part of the 007 Magazine archive.

He then consolidated his business around the magazine and another Bond spin-off, The James Bond Girls – an upmarket glossy hardback produced annually from 1989-99.

"EON didn't really want to get involved with 007 Magazine when it started in the '70s," said Graham. "Nobody had foreseen what a film franchise could really become in those days. Amazingly, their press people would happily send out original negatives and transparencies, and interviews and other material were relatively easy to source."

"That's all changed, of course. James Bond – Licence to Kill has become James Bond – Licence to Print Money – and is now very jealously guarded."

He is fairly tight-lipped about his relationship with EON, known to wield its legal stick freely, but added, with just a hint of 007 steel: "We are the original and the best, and we're back."

BEST BOND: Sean Connery is Graham's favourite

How Sheps keeps its

BREWER and pub operator Shepherd Neame put 'For Sale' signs on some 35 under-performing pubs as it faced up to the recession.

But the Faversham-based brewery – established in 1698 and the UK's oldest – is weathering the downturn better than most of the beer and pub industry, according to newly-announced annual results.

Sales in both managed and tenanted pubs are up and beer volumes are also growing, with the licence-brewed Japanese Asahi Super Dry being its best performer.

But Sheps says overall results were dragged down by higher costs and the poor performance of smaller pubs – the 10 per cent of the estate being axed.

Of these, 13 properties are already sold or under contract to be sold for a total of £3.4 million, but the company also acquired 13 properties from major pub chain Punch for £14.8m during the financial year.

A spokesman said: "We have bought a number of well-performing pubs recently so are having to sell to make up the deficit. It is not unusual for us to buy and sell every year, but maybe it is not usually done in this quantity.

"These are tough times for the industry as a whole, so seen in that light the figures for trading are not bad at all."

Company turnover rose 7.7 per cent to £109.5m on trading up to June 27 – year end covered by the results – but higher raw material, production and overhead costs caused operating profits to fall 12.7 per cent to £9.5m.

But the effect of the recession showed in the rising amount of bottled beer within the overall 6.3 per cent growth in beer volumes, caused by customers electing to drink at home rather than visit a pub.

Asahi Super Dry, Spitfire, Whitstable Bay and Masterbrew led a 29 per cent hike in Sheps' bottled beer, which should gain in profitability from a new bottling system now going on-line.

This growth is despite a fall in the company's once thriving export of bottled beers to French hypermarkets, which UK tourists brought back by the car and coachload.

"The cross-Channel business has declined due to consumer habits changing, driven largely by a more competitive domestic market," said a spokesman.

"More recently, it has also been affected by the weaker pound. However, sales in France are developing outside of the cross-Channel Calais market into their wider domestic mar-

No dispute about Stuart's role in Vertex Law team

KINGS Hill-based Vertex Law's busy dispute resolution team has been boosted by the appointment of Stuart Love.

Mr Love is relocating from Birmingham to join the team which helps commercial clients resolve business disputes through negotiation or, if that fails, through mediation or litigation.

Rebecca Tinham, head of dispute Resolution at Vertex, said: "The growth of our service hasn't been hindered by the difficult financial climate.

"It's hard to say whether it has actually contributed to our growth, but we're certainly very busy.

"We pride ourselves on direct communication, speed of response, accessibility and our strength of analysis, and we aim to deliver cost-effective results."

Ms Tinham said Vertex Law met a large number of candidates before appointing Mr Love as they wanted to ensure the role was filled by someone who would share their "passion and commitment".

"Stuart fits the bill perfectly," she said.

Mr Love is keen to hit the ground running: "When I met Rebecca it was clear to me that we had very similar ideas about how dispute resolution services could and should be provided to commercial clients," he said.

"The opportunity to join such an energetic, forward-thinking firm was too good to miss."

"The strength of our balance sheet has enabled us to invest through the downturn which has presented an excellent opportunity to acquire 15 high-quality pubs at attractive prices."

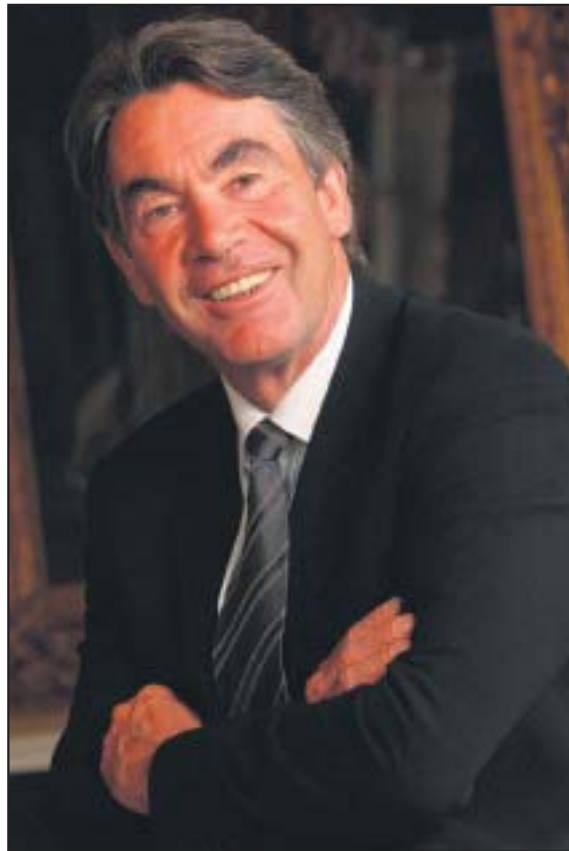

"We have also completed the modernisation programme of our production and distribution facilities. Although the general short-term economic outlook is uncertain, we have made an encouraging start to the year, with strong beer volumes and like-for-like sales growth.

"We remain confident in the quality of our pub estate, the strength of our brands, our overall market position and our future prospects."

ORGANIC GROWTH: Whitstable Bay helped the brewer's bottled sales climb 29 per cent

IT HAS been a tough couple of years for the brewing and pub trade, yet Shepherd Neame has maintained profits and laid down a clear – even ruthless – strategy, writes Andy Rogers.

Rather than estate growth for the sake of it – a policy that has brought grief to many bigger operators – Sheps is pursuing a shape-up-or-ship-out approach; pubs have come and pubs have gone this year as Kent's own brewer expands across Sussex, London and Essex.

Once seen – unfairly it seems – as a conservative local brewer in the shadow of the major players, Sheps grasped the opportunity offered by big brewers' pub disposals after the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report two decades ago, carefully switching its estate from predominantly wet (beer) trade outlets to more upmarket and flexible operations including award-winning gastropubs.

And the company has created a grand stage for its traditional bitters, helped by eye-catching campaigns such as the Bottle of Britain ads for its Spitfire brand.

Shrewd licensing deals have also brought in 'icon' brands such as Asahi Super Dry – its fastest growing bottled beer – and the Indian restaurant staple, Kingfisher.

It also has a wide array of draught lagers such as German Holsten Export, Dutch Oranjeboom, and its long-running Hurlimann brand from Switzerland.

Insurance postcode lottery

MANY things these days seem to come down to your postcode and some of them are widely publicised, such as the type of service available to you on the NHS.

Over the last couple of decades, as insurers have become more sophisticated in their underwriting techniques, your postcode has also affected what level of house insurance premium you can get, or the price of your car insurance premium.

This postcode lottery is so exact that there can even be subtle differences based on which side of a road you may be on.

The life insurance industry is currently trialing postcode underwriting.

So if you live in an area where

By LIZ RULE
Pharon Independent
Financial Advisers Ltd

mortality rates are low, it's probable you may live longer and so may benefit from a cheaper premium.

On the other hand, if mortality rates are high you could present a bigger risk and your premium may be loaded as a result.

Unfortunately, statistically, the less money people have, the more likely they will be living in a deprived area, which means insurers may in future be making life insurance more expensive for those who can least afford it.

Some of these people are also statistically less likely to have jobs that provide life insurance as a benefit. They are also more likely to have financial dependants and need protection the most.

Firstly, as life insurance is such an important issue, I recommend that if you have not had a review of your protection requirements for a few years, that you do so.

Secondly, I recommend you use an independent financial adviser and check with them whether your application is affected by postcode.

Ask them if it's possible to choose an insurer where you can be underwritten based on your individual lifestyle and health.

100 YEARS AGO: THERE were signs that the established order was being swept away after an FA Cup weekend in which former finalists the Royal Engineers were beaten 5-1 by Kent League champions Northfleet United, the Sappers suffering the backlash from Northfleet's shock defeat the previous week at home to Sheppey.

The Engineers were lagging a long way behind New Brompton and also Chatham, with whom they would eventually merge. The Chats won 2-1 on a heavy surface at Maidstone United to reach the next round.

A mile or so down the road from Northfleet's ground their future partners – but then bitter rivals Gravesend United – known as the Shrimpers, were held to a drab 1-1 draw by Royal Navy Depot. The correspondent concluded: "Either the public of Gravesend are not what might be called sporting – or interest in the town club is on the wane."

50 YEARS AGO: SO exasperated were Maidstone United's supporters by their team's start to the season they wrote an open letter begging for the club to appoint a coach.

"Why is the pitch treated as a sacred plot?" they asked, (if only they had, their present day counterparts might be reflecting).

"We know it is nice, but we do not come to see the grass grow. Let the team get on the pitch and train. Maidstone must be the only club in the country that keeps its pitch as a showpiece and does not train on it."

The standard of play was also criticised. "Surely someone can be trained to place the ball in the corner of the net, on the ground and not blaze it over the crossbar. An Isthmian League side should not be flabbergasted when a penalty is awarded, so much so that the players look at each other with an 'after you George' expression." All this after Roy Fillery missed a penalty against St Albans City.

25 YEARS AGO: CHRIS Tavare, bitterly disappointed at losing the captaincy of Kent to Chris Cowdrey, was set for talks with club officials to discuss his playing future at St Lawrence.

And can you guess the identity of the local football manager who made the following statement? "Yes, I ranted and raved because in this game, as a manager, you can only say please and thank you for so long."

"Well, I've stopped saying please and thank you and from now on there will be a different approach."

A duly terrified Maidstone side heeded Bill Williams' words and fought back from 2-0 down at home to Enfield to earn a point, Billy Hughes and Jon Sille sparing them from Williams' wrath at full time.

Coleman eyes world championship chance

By TOM HOWARD

ADOPTING a relaxed approach is how Kent cross-country runner Mike Coleman intends to finally reach his ultimate goal of competing at the World Championships this season.

The 31-year-old is one of the county's most successful cross-country runners with six consecutive Kent Cross Country titles to his name, but this season Coleman is hoping to go one step further.

The Medway & Maidstone runner is gearing up for the new cross-country season and has already set himself a number of targets, with his priority being a coveted place in the World Championships in Poland next March.

Last season was one of Coleman's most successful to date with a convincing victory to clinch his sixth county championship, and he came within seconds of securing a medal after finishing fourth at the South of England Championships in Aldershot.

Intense

After missing out on the World Championships last year, Coleman, from Dover, believes a less intense approach could be the key to success at the World Trials in Nottingham next March.

He said: "I don't really see this year as being an important one and I am trying a different approach this season. In the past I have focused too hard on running and it has led to injuries."

"This year I am still focused on what I want to achieve, but I am taking a bit of a relaxed approach. Obviously the World Championships are a target for me and it would be great to be in a position to get involved in that."

Although Coleman has six consecutive Kent Cross Country titles, the annual event at Detling in January, is still an integral part of his season.

He said: "Winning the county championships is a target for me. I am desperate to equal Barry Royden's record of eight titles, but I have still got a way to go to do that."

Coleman looks in ominous form ahead of the cross-country season after winning the Givauden Ashford 10k race last weekend for the fourth time. His Kent cross-country season will begin with a race in Swanley on November 8.

Lydden retains Euro rallycross stage

LYDDEN Hill has beaten off competition from Austria and Norway to host a round of the European Rallycross Championship next year.

The Kent circuit, known as the 'home of rallycross', hosted the opening round of this year's European championship after a 14-year absence from the series.

After the success of the event, motorsport governing body, the FIA, has decided to keep Lydden on the 2010 calendar.

A record crowd of 15,000 flocked to the circuit in April, which was won by 13-time European champion Kenneth Hansen.

Instead of hosting the opening round as it did this year, the circuit, near Dover, will host round three of the championship on Monday, May 30. The British Rallycross Championship meeting will now take place on the Easter Bank Holiday weekend.

COMPETITION: Lydden beat off a number of foreign tracks to stage the European Rallycross

Circuit managing director Amy Doran is delighted Lydden has been included on the calendar and said there is a possibility of securing a three-year contract with the series.

She said: "It's brilliant to be able to host it again, especially after all the hard work we have put in last year. There were some really strong contenders to host it and we were a little worried we wouldn't make it on the calendar."

"The FIA were very impressed with the event we put on last year. I hope we can put on an even better event this year."

Funding for world-class £6m facility rejected by Sport England

By FRED ATKINS

PLANS to build a multi-million pound cycling park next to the A2 at Gravesend suffered a set-back this week when it was revealed that Sport England had turned down an application for funding.

Kent County Council applied for £6 million from Sport England's Sustainable Facilities Fund, but its initial bid was rejected, meaning the original plans for a world-class facility with all-weather road circuits, mountain bike trails and a BMX track may have to be scaled down.

Neither the council nor Sport England were prepared to comment on specific reasons for refusing the bid, but project manager Laurence Tricker said the it was still very much alive and that he was due for further negotiations with Sport England.

"We're revising our bid and I'm still opti-

DOWNSIZED: Funding rejection means smaller version of cycling park is more likely mistic that something will happen," he said. "Sport England have indicated their support in principle and we're going back to them at the end of the month to discuss it."

The scheme has attracted high-profile support from Ashford's Olympic champion Jamie Staff and the former Tour de France yellow jersey wearer David Millar.

However, competition for funding was always likely to be intense and a spokesman for Sport England admitted this contributed to the decision, along with the size of the bid, which, had it been successful, would have taken up 60 per cent of this year's Sustainable Facilities Fund.

"The whole fund for this year is worth £10m and we had a total of 69 applications, making bids worth a total of £42m, so it was heavily oversubscribed," he said. "But it was a good project and we'll be working with all the people who were turned down to look at alternative methods of funding."

He confirmed that KCC would also be able to submit a second bid.

When the scheme was unveiled in August, Tricker told Kent on Sunday there was a Plan B in the event of a rejection.

With £5m of funds already in place, courtesy of KCC, the Homes and Community Agency, and British Cycling, some of the facilities are still likely to be built and there was some good news this week, when planning permission was given for the park's showpiece pavilion.

The building, designed by the Canterbury-based firm Clague, is expected to meet rigorous design standards and include renewable regeneration facilities that will provide at least 10 per cent of power requirements.

"It's a positive to add to a somewhat negative situation," Tricker said.

Chocolate powered F3 car is ready to eat up Brands

MOTORSPORT fans will get a glimpse into the future at Brands Hatch this afternoon with the competitive debut of an eco-friendly Formula 3 car, powered by chocolate.

The car, designed by a team of researchers at Warwick University, is a world first for motor racing and will complete its first-ever race in the Formula 3 Cardinus Championship. It's partly built from potatoes and carrots, with an engine fuelled by a mixture of vegetable oil and chocolate.

Race cars have often experimented with alternative renewable fuels in the past, but this is the first car to be completely eco-friendly.

Rochester-based single-seater driver Aaron Steele will pilot the car for its maiden race and after a brief test last month at Rockingham, he feels there is no reason why he can't secure a podium finish.

He said: "It's a unique opportunity which I am looking forward to. I have driven the car before, but since then it has been upgraded so we are expecting it to be right on the pace. A couple of podium finishes may not be out of our reach."

"As a driver I have never really thought a car could be made in this way, so it's very interesting. It has sparked a lot of interest in the sport and I think cars and technology like this need to be embraced in the future. We have all seen Audi and Peugeot win the Le Mans 24 hour race using diesel cars, so this could be the future."

Although excited by the challenge, Steele admitted it's been tough for him this season without a regular drive, and hopes this weekend's experience will put him in the frame for a new drive next year.

He said: "This weekend it will be nice just to get back out there racing. I have been working hard throughout the year trying to get funds for next year and hopefully I will be back on the grid somewhere."

Ford driving for strong finish to a fine season

MATT Ford will attempt to top off a stellar finish to the season when he takes part in the Srixon PGA Play-offs next week.

The season-ending tournament brings together the top 21 players from the PGA's regions in Britain and Ireland to crown an overall champion.

At stake is a lucrative prize which includes entry to the European Tour's biggest event – the BMW PGA Championship at Wentworth – plus places in the Scottish Open, Wales Open and European Open.

Ford, a professional at Maidstone's Tudor Park, goes into the tournament with arguably the best form in the field. The 31-year-old enjoyed a superb finish to the PGA South Region season, winning two events in a fortnight.

The victories in the Southern Masters at West Malling and Keith MacDonald Memorial Matchplay championship at Tynley, Hampshire, saw the Bearsted golfer finish second

IN FORM: Maidstone's Matt Ford overall in the Order of Merit.

The tournament, held at Little Aston near Birmingham, begins on Wednesday.

Mixed reaction to ELV rules changing the face of rugby

New laws in rugby continue to divide opinion in the game. STEVE TERVET looks at what effect they've had in county known for its strong rugby roots

A YEAR on from the introduction of Experimental Law Variations (ELV), Kent's officials, coaches and players remain divided in their opinions of what has been one of rugby union's biggest talking points.

When the 13 rule changes were implemented at the beginning of last season, many clubs were concerned by a lack of consistent refereeing with some laws thrown open to the interpretation of officials, and others seemingly threatening the future of old-fashioned forward play.

Andy Golding, director of rugby at London 1 South side Maidstone, said: "Referees haven't quite got to grips with the situation in the ruck – it's up to their discretion what to penalise and with 19 different ruck offences, it's a real grey area."

"However, rugby is changing, it's becoming quicker and the ELVs have made people sit up and think about the way they play the game. The fact teams have become more astute tactically is a very good thing for the game."

By contrast, Westcombe Park's director of rugby, Steve Reynolds, who raised the same point at the start of 2008-09, now feels the men in the middle have got things under control when it comes to the variations.

"The referees have improved greatly as time's gone on, they are now used to the rules and it's a lot more black and white – there are no grey areas any more," he said. "We've definitely had to adjust our own tactics – we're seeing a lot more scrum-halves kicking just outside their own 22 and less fly-halves kicking for touch. There's no doubt the ELVs have speeded the game up."

Westcombe Park ply their trade in National League 2 South and there has been a general acceptance across the board that the ELVs have had a varying impact at different standards of the game.

Thanet Wanderers compete in London 1 South and head their coach, Darryl Vas, believes some of the rule changes have failed to have a major impact at that level.

"I don't think the rule about standing five yards back at the scrum has made much difference in our league, but it may have had an effect at a higher level," he said. "More changes have been made since this time last year and to be honest, I'm quite ambivalent about the whole thing – we've just got to look at making it work for us."

Agreement

"I'm happy they've brought back the driving maul – this is supposed to be a game for people of all sizes and it was being turned into something more like rugby league. If we wanted to play rugby league then we'd go and play it."

There is almost universal agreement when it comes to the reinstatement of the original maul law – one of the 13 ELVs stated players could defend a maul by pulling it down, but a backlash from all sides of the game resulted in a rethink and the variation, along with the line-out experiment, was scrapped.

Geoff Davies, a Kent League referee, said: "I never thought the law about pulling down the maul was a good idea. It was becoming dangerous and I like to keep the players on their feet for as long as possible. I don't know why they changed the line-out law last season – it was terrible, so many players were coming in and out, it was like Strictly Come Dancing."

"You will always get different views but I feel the game is moving in the right direction. I don't want to see a game where the influence of forwards is negated – I would hate it to reach a stage where we

PERMITTED: Lifting players at the line-out will still be allowed

EXPERIMENTAL LAW VARIATIONS – A BRIEF GUIDE

IN May, 2008, it was decided to bring 13 law changes into northern hemisphere rugby union, with 23 already in use in the southern hemisphere.

The variations were introduced in autumn 2008, with the aim of producing more open, free-flowing rugby.

Three of the changes proved hugely unpopular – including those permitting the collapsing of mauls and allowing unrestricted numbers in the line-out. Both were changed for the start of 2009-10.

The remaining 10 ELVs have been recommended to be passed into law – these include:

- Playing the ball back into the 22 and kicking out of the play on the full does not mean ground gained
- Players less than five yards behind a scrum will be ruled off-side
- A quick throw-in can go back towards a team's own goal line
- Lifting players at line-outs is permitted take the game down the rugby league route. This is a fantastic sport for all shapes and sizes – fat blokes, thin blokes, all sorts."

It's back to school for Gills ace

A FEAR of ending up on the post-retirement scrapheap has prompted Mark Bentley to begin a university degree course.

The Gillingham midfielder turns 32 in January and is into the final year of his contract at Priestfield. Although Bentley is not planning to hang up his boots for some time, he is determined not to repeat the mistakes of many lower league players who retire without making financial plans for the future.

"It needs to be done because I don't want to finish my football career and end up on the scrapheap like a lot of players who don't realise how tough it's going to be," he told Kent on Sunday.

"I've had a taste of how hard you have to work outside of football when I played part-time, so I want to make sure I'm prepared."

Bentley has signed up for a sports science and coaching course at Roehampton University, one of several degrees run by the Professional Footballers' Association in recent years. Attending lectures twice a week after training, the bulk of the course is done independently at home.

After a lengthy career in the game, the former Gravesend & Northfleet player admits it has been difficult getting back into studying.

"It's been a while and I wasn't the best the first time round," he joked.

"I don't know where it's going to lead me, I'm looking at maybe going into teaching or staying in the game. Hopefully it opens up a few avenues up for me. I'm enjoying it to be fair; it's another challenge for me, but I don't want it to affect my football."

THINKING AHEAD: Mark Bentley is already planning for life after football

Level-headed Sam's on his way up

WHILE the majority of county cricketers will be putting their feet up and taking a well-earned rest, Kent youngster Sam Northeast will be travelling the globe to continue his cricket education, writes Glenn Pearson.

The 19-year-old capped off a debut season by carrying his bat in an unbeaten 128 – his first century for Kent – which came against Derbyshire in the final championship game of the summer.

His progress for Kent this summer has not gone unrecognised by the national selectors, who included both Northeast and county team-mate Alex Blake in the England performance squad for the winter tour to South Africa.

The Ashford-born batsman joins up with the 41-man squad in Loughborough next month before the three-week tour gets under way and is looking forward to the challenge.

"I knew a few weeks ago after getting the call but it's nice to be included in something like that," he said.

"I see it as part of my winter programme and a chance to make myself a better player, it'll be good fun.

"I went to South Africa on an under-19 tour last year and this time around it will be nice to test myself against other young players coming through.

It doesn't end there for the England under-

19 batsman, who has scheduled a trip to India to work on his technique against spin bowling, before heading back out to South Africa to work with former county coach Graham Ford.

The South African has clearly left a mark on the Kent youngster. Northeast attributes much of his progress to Ford's style of coaching and there's evidence of that, not only in his batting, but his whole approach to the game which carries all the hallmarks of Kent's outgoing director of cricket.

"The next stage of my career is to come back from this winter a better player, but it's about not getting too far ahead of myself," Northeast said. "I want to make a mark on the side and cement my place in the team so that I am one of the first names on the team sheet at the beginning of the season.

"I learnt this summer that it's not how well you can hit a cricket ball, it's how you deal with the situation and that comes with experience, but it's something I'll have to learn quickly."

Although having decided to take another gap year from Durham University to concentrate on cementing a place at St Lawrence, Northeast admits he will forget about studying if he becomes a regular fixture in the Kent side.

The teenager is also in the process of signing a one-year extension to his contract at Kent which would have expired at the end of next summer.

RECALL: Kent's fast bowler Amjad Khan is heading to South Africa this winter

Whole Surrey saga is at an end as Key re-signs for Kent

New contract quashes rumours

By GLENN PEARSON

SPECULATION as to whether Rob Key would be moving to Surrey was finally quashed this week when the Kent skipper signed a new long-term contract at the club.

The 30-year-old was the subject of interest from Surrey, but has shown his commitment to Kent by signing an extension to his contract that was due to expire at the end of 2010.

Key, who made his First-Class debut for Kent in 1998 and has scored more than 14,000 runs for the club, has also been reappointed as captain for the 2010 season.

He said: "I'm very happy to commit my future to Kent. There have been lots of rumours about me leaving the club but at no stage have I spoken, or have other clubs spoken to me.

"I am and always will be committed to trying to win trophies and bring success to Kent County Cricket Club."

New head coach Paul Farbrace fell short of saying it was a relief that the skipper had signed a new deal, but did say the news meant the club can now move on by building their side around Key.

"Everyone will be pleased because if you get your captain signing a long-term contract, together with one of your best players in Martin van Jaarsveld, they are players you can build your team around," he told Kent on Sunday.

"I don't think he was ever going to leave but I know there were lots of rumours, with Surrey in particular, and I think it's a compliment when other counties are interested in your players – I would be concerned if they weren't."

Key, who scored a personal best of 270 not out against Glamorgan and was part of England's ICC World Twenty20 squad, led Kent back to the top tier in the County Championship last summer.

Contribution

Graham Johnson, Kent's chairman of cricket, said: "Rob has made a tremendous contribution to the club, both as a player and captain.

"We see him, along with some other key players, as being the core of our side so I am very pleased that he has committed his long-term future to Kent.

"He was open and honest throughout contract talks and brought a sense of fun to discussions. We look forward to him continuing to bring these characteristics to what he does, both on and off the field.

"The cricket committee was unanimous in wanting him to continue as captain in 2010."

Khan back in England frame after tour call-up

THE England selectors remain interested in Kent fast bowler Amjad Khan after they named him in the England performance squad for next month's tour of South Africa.

Khan, 28, was named as one of four players in a new enhanced England performance programme.

Together with Mark Davies (Durham), Michael Carberry (Hampshire) and Stephen Moore (Lancashire), Khan is part of the A list in the group, which means he is perceived to be closest to graduating to the England team.

Talent

While it's good news for the Danish-born bowler, Kent head coach Paul Farbrace insists Khan must put in the hard yards in to make the most of his talent.

"It's good that he is in the selectors' thoughts but he knows he's not on a Test tour and there's a lot of hard work to be put in," he said. "It's great to be in the pot, but equally it's about showing what he is capable of."

Khan, who took 36 First-Class wickets during the summer, is named in the main group and is hopeful of adding to the one Test he played for England in the series against West Indies last winter.

"This is great news for me," he said. "It goes to show that I am still highly thought of by the England selectors. Theoretically, I guess, I'm only a couple of injuries away from playing international cricket again."

KENT TARGET HOGGY DEAL

County express interest in ex-England bowler

EXCLUSIVE

By GLENN PEARSON

FORMER England bowler Matthew Hoggard is a target for Kent as they look to bolster their attack in preparation for a return to the top tier of the County Championship.

Hoggard is available after an acrimonious and shock departure from Yorkshire, and could be the man to help bring along Kent's young bowlers in Division One next summer.

The 32-year-old, who took 248 wickets in 67 Tests for England in an international career that spans almost eight years, would undoubtedly be a major acquisition for the county, although his wage demands and length of contract could prove a stumbling block.

Interested

New head coach Paul Farbrace revealed to Kent on Sunday that the club's cricket committee are interested in bringing him to Canterbury, but it's understood they are yet to talk to the player.

"Any seam bowler that is on the market with that sort of quality you have to be interested in," Farbrace told Kent on Sunday. "Anyone with that quality, at 32, who has taken more than 600 First-Class wickets, you have to have a look at. He is someone that would bring quality to the attack."

"We have talked about him, yes, and we are looking at his record as we need to know all about him."

Hoggard expressed frustration at his departure from Yorkshire, claiming the White Rose county had offered him a two-year deal at the start of last season, which they took back when he decided to wait until the end of the summer to make a decision about his future.

Leicestershire have already expressed an interest in the seam bowler, although with Kent being promoted to Division One of the championship, it's likely they would have the greater pulling power.

Hoggard is eager to continue playing county cricket and was quoted this week as saying: "I was looking forward to using my experience to bring on the next generation of Yorkshire bowlers, but I'll have to do that somewhere else now. I still feel as though I've got a good few years in me and it's up to me now to prove that Yorkshire were wrong to let me go."

While Kent have expressed an interest in the charismatic cricketer, the chance of him signing for Kent is likely to depend on his demands. With one of the lowest budgets and staff on the county circuit, Farbrace, along with skipper Rob Key and coach Simon Willis, will have to weigh up whether they plump for Hoggard or look elsewhere to supplement their bowling attack.

Farbrace said: "We have identified players that we are interested in that can add quality to the squad. We are working through those to see who is available on our wish list. The important thing is to make sure they can add quality and be the right personality that will fit into the team."

GILLINGHAM strengthened their ranks this week with two loan signings, each arriving with a point to prove to their respective clubs, writes David Pritchard.

Colchester striker Scott Vernon and West Ham defender Matt Fry signed one-month loan deals at the club on Thursday, but neither ruled out staying for longer if necessary.

Just three weeks ago Gills boss Mark Stimson was unable to go out and make additions, but extra resources were made available to bolster two key areas of the side.

Vernon, 25, arrives to help take some of the goalscoring burden off Simeon Jackson. The former Blackpool forward scored three goals in Colchester's first five games this season – including one in the league game against the Gills in August – but has fallen down the pecking order since Aidy Boothroyd took over as manager last month.

Several clubs were interested in signing Vernon on a short-term deal, but he told Kent on Sunday the deciding factor was the Gills' playing style.

"Both games we've played against Gillingham this season they've looked to play football, which is a big thing for me," he said. "I like to play in a footballing team and I think that will suit me more than a long-ball team. Obviously they've got some good players and it's been known they were looking for a striker, so it's fitted in."

While Vernon will be hoping to perform well enough at Priestfield to get back into Boothroyd's plans, Fry's main motivation is to gain experience.

The 19-year-old has progressed as far as West Ham's reserves, but like the majority of youngsters at top-flight clubs, he has found the only way to gain first-team experience is by dropping down into the Football League.

Despite being forced to temporarily leave his parent club, the centre-back, who was keen to return after a trial at Priestfield last month, does not see it as a step backwards.

"Not at all, having spoken to West Ham they see it as a big step forward," he said. "[West Ham manager Gianfranco] Zola's not afraid to put players in, but it's not that common."

"If you look across the Premiership you see quite often players take it to get first-team football. It's a big thing and you can learn a lot from it – that's what I'm hoping to do."
